TO THE FREE ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY.

There are those who, by their professions, their writings, their addresses, and all their public declamations, have brought upon themselves the character of advocates for the rights of the people, and who, indeed, have pursued so resolute a course of conduct as not to have left the least shadow of doubt in the public mind, that they have been actuated by no other principle than a sincere desire for the welfare and happiness of the nation. But there are others, who, by their conduct and conduct alone, have gained a reputation for the advancement of the public interest, and who have been enabled to pursue a course of conduct which has not only been calculated to advance the public happiness, but which has also been productive of the greatest benefit to the individual.

A sense of duty, a sense of honor, and a sense of self-respect, are the motives in offering my candid services to our recent Electors, each of which are not the slightest reason why I should again contest for the rights in my power.

I beg you would be so good as to answer me.

Your obedient servant,

Limerick, George.

TO THE FREE ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY.

The re-election of a Committee with the high character of the late Committee, and the unalterable attachment of the people to the independence, liberty, and happiness of the empire. This, and this alone, is the object of the address of the people to the Electors in the County of the Popular will.

Fellow-Citizens, the united spirit which has been manifested in the late address, and the zeal for your interest which has been evinced by the people to promote to the people the happiness which is the great object of your care.

With the strong sentiments of patriotism and the obligations of the Country, and Fellow-Citizens, you have done me the honor to elect me a Representative for the County.
