Scott's Last Message,

Scott's Last Message,

The Daily Telegraph's own correspondent in New York cables—It was my privilege to say farewell to Captain Scott when he sailed from London on the first stage of his first journey in quest of the South Pole. Pressed to give a message for publication Captain Scott said—"If I don't come back, you may rely upon'nt that I am dead and when you know I'm dead I'll let you say this "It is my indication to find the South Pole. If I fail the first time I shall know why I fail and try again It ig my desire to keep on trying until I succeed. No effort of which I am capable will be spared. So far as human ingensity and our means can devise, we shall eliminate danger, but there will be a time possibly a great risk—and that risk when "Libert to face cheerically. Wilham MacDonald and Company, Limited, Directory Press, London Road, Edinburgh; London Office: 72 Leadenhall Street, R.O.; Dablin Office: 7 Flock Street.

We have received a copy of the 26th annual edition of this eminently useful and practical work, which contains a vast amount of informawork, when contains a vast amount of informa-tion of value and interest to manufacturers, increasing traders, hotels, and public institutions. The exhaustive applications and classified lists that it contains have been compiled, as usual, with the atmost care and lucidity, and thus the Directory is an excellent vade mecum for business men. Since the last edition the book has undergons a complete and thorough revision sections are now included. These are Members of Parliament for Ireland, Magistrates, Municipal Lists for Dublin, Belfast, Limerick, Londonderry, and Cork, and County Councillors. He saw nothing unusual in as ing Mrs. Mechan and her family in bed at 10 p'clock on Saturday night. His attestion was called to the step outside Mrs. Mechan's door; it was dangerous in the dark. addition to all this varied and comprehensive information concerning Ireland, we find extended sections relating to Liverpool and Glasjow, which are a valuable adjunct, seeing how intimately this sountry is associated in its buginess relations with these important centres of commerce.
The opening portion of the work is devoted to an Irish Municipal Directory.
Then the tuoms and villages are divided the section, according to provinces and counties, and following these are the Irish Bank section, a Home, Colonial, and Foreign Merdeutile guide, and an Irish Commercial gazetter, of counties, eities, towns, and parishes. Liveripool and Birkenhead, and Glasgow form a considerable portion of the bulky volume, which is turned out in highly superior style, the lettergress being excellent, while the work is strongly cound, in green, and illuminated overs. There is, it should have been stated, an alphabetical
