EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NENAGH.

" An attack was made on two soldiers of the 62d Regiment, stationed at Fort-Cameron, on the banks of the Shannon, distant about eight miles from hence; they were waylaid on their recurn home from a place called Kilbarron, through the fields, between six and 7 o'clock, on Saturday evening, by five or six men, who jumped from behind a ditch and attacked them with a volley of stones. Corporal Ryan, who was in the rere, turned round and drew his bayonet, but was instantly knocked down; one the ruffians then took it and gave him a wound in the becabout three inches deep. They surely would have the offselered were it not for the presence of mind of with arms dier (Henry,) who called out to the men believed theredvance to their assistance; the assessins case is undergoing really such at hand and fled. The "stigation."

On Sunday, the Man held an inquisition at the Infirmary, on the held an inquisition at who, a few days before, of John Murry, intoxication, fell into a hatter at which was full of vitriol—the unfortunate ne which was in excruciating torture, when deal relieved his sufferings on Sunday night. Verdict mondingly.

On Saturday evening, Thomas Meany, a quiet well conducted man, returning to his house at the New Road, was attacked on the height of Thomond-gate by a party of ten men, who beat him so unmercifully with stones, that he died on Sunday afternoon in the County Infirmary. A few hours previous to his dissolution, the Mayor attended at his bedside, and was so fortunate as to receir the names of some of the persons concerned in this unprovoked murder, committed in a populous neighbourhood, and at an early hour, it not being seven o'clock when the wretched man received his mortal wounds. The Police apprehended Patrick Mulqueeny, charged with the murder, and we hope to have the satisfaction shortly to announce that all the perpetrators will be brought to justice.

A military guard will in future be stationed on Thomond-Bridge, to profect the passengers in that vicinity.

Saturday night, some villains maliciously threw down a quantity of the battlement of Thomond-Bridge.

The gun which had been stolen from Mr. Daniel Brody, of Mount-Shannon, on the 24th ult. has been returned to the Rev. Hugh B. Huleatt by a respectable Protestant farmer, in whose thatch it was maliciously placed.

The house of Edmond Kennedy, a farmer, in the Barony of Kilnamanagh, was attacked on the night of the 17th inst. by upwards of 20 men, some armed with pistols, who forced admittance in the name of the Police. Kennedy, his son, and a schoolmaster, with a turf-slane and pitchforks, made a brave defence, but were overpowered by the party, who left two of them nearly lifeless. They then dragged forth Kennedy's niece, who lay concealed behind a bed, and tying her hands and legs, carried her away on horseback near four miles. abandoned the girl next morning on hearing the
