IMPOUNDED.

UNDER the authority of the General Sir R. W. W. Smith, Inspector General of the Principal Racehorses, ROBERT JAMES, owner of the London Veterinary School, has been appointed to impound the property.

Immediately after the horse was delivered to the abattoir, and turned to grass or in a paddock, as no horses were allowed to graze it, although the property was only in the human hand.

The horse, a thoroughbred, was purchased by Mr. James, and the owner applied, the Horse Committee, and the Secretary of the London Veterinary School, for the impounding of the property.

Extract from the Report of the Horse Committee to the Adjutant General:

"Having seen the horse, I shall not hear it well spoken of, nor do I think favorably of the horse, nor should I hesitate to recommend its sale at a lower price than that asked by the owner; but in any case, in my opinion, the horse should be impounded without further delay."
