purchased the wood of Bansagh, containing 104 acres, for £2000.

By the death of Mrs. Ford and Mr. Samuel Alleyn, Lord Llandaff has got an accession of £5000 per ann. to his rents in the Co. Tipperary.

ENNIS, MARCH 1.—Illicit distillation is carried on to a very great extent in this county, and never did it produce so alarming effects as at present. We understand that one of our most active revenue officers was fired at, in the neighbourhood of Kildysart, on Friday last, while bringing a seizure to town. This terrible practice, like every other offence which is allowed to pass unpunished, is meeting energy from the abortive execution of our laws. But we hope that our magistrates by timely and effective exertion will stop the progressive march of sanguine turbulence, and prevent a counter part of the scenes which have lately taken place at Cratloe.

Last Sunday morning, James Graves, Esq. surveyor of excise, assisted by Mr. Roughan, excise officer, and a party of the 88th regt. surprized a complete private distillery at full work, near Corofin, Co. Clare, which they destroyed, and made prisoners of two men whom they found at work in the concerns. They returned to Ennis with the still, head and worm which they lodged in his Majesty's stores.

It having been communicated to Peter Comyn, of Bishops Quarter, Co. Clare, Esq. that a suspicious stranger was in the neighbourhood of Kinvara, Glaninagh, Duerrough, Termoyle, &c circulating forgeries on different banks, that active and spirited magistratè immediately procured a party of the 6th dragoon guards with whom he scoured that district of country, but we are concerned to say without effect, as the delinquent took the alarm and effected his escape to the fastnesses of Cunnamara. However, Mr. Comyn's excursion was not altogether unavailing, as he discovered a very considerable portion of the materials of a brig lately stranded. The cargo is under the care of Mr. Comyn and his brother officer, Captain Morris, of the Townsend revenue cruiser, now stationed in the bay of Galway.

We are able to state from authority, that there is every expectation of a repeal of the late duties laid on foreign flax seed and bleaching materials; and that all intention of repealing the transit duty on foreign linens is abandoned. The public are highly indebted to the Earl of Yarmouth for his attention to the petitions of the linen trade on these important subjects. His Lordship presented the petition of the linen trade, for the repeal of the duties on bleaching materials. &c and we are happy to anticipate its success.—Belfast Chronicle.

We are sorry to state, that in a neighbouring Barony of Iffa and Offa East near Ballydine, between Clonmel and Carrick, there occurred on Saturday evening last, within the space of an hour or two, about 7 or 8 o'clock, the robbery of a Mr. Cantwell—the beating, very severely, of two other persons—and the murder of a poor honest man named John Cummins, by three men armed with firelocks. On the investigation at the coroner's inquest there appeared a most determined unwillingness to disclose the truth.—Clonmel Herald.

COMMITTED,

To the county jail by John Evans, Esq. Timothy Fraley, and Thomas Mackey, charged with burglary and felony.
By Richard Waller, Esq. Mathew Ryan, charged with burglary and robbery.
Under transmit warrant of the clerk of the crown of the county of Kerry, John Sullivan, charged with felony in this county.
To the city jail by Alderman Watson, Patrick and Charles Considine's charged with having malt in process for distillation in their possession.

BIRTH,

On the 22d Feb. at Greenwood Lodge, county Wicklow, the Lady of the Hon. Mathew Plunkett, of a Son.
At his seat, Welchestown, county Cork, the Lady of John Wrixon, Jun. Esq. of a Son.
In Dublin, the Lady of Brigade Major Langley, of a Daughter.
In Dublin, the Lady of John Kingston James, Esq. of a Son.
On Monday last, in Cork, the Lady of Neal Dodd, Esq. of a Son.
At Tanlaugh, county Waterford, the Lady of B. Colclough, Esq. of a Daughter.

DIED,

On Saturday last, at his seat, Woodhill, near Cork, in the 30th year of his age, Cooper Penrose, Esq.—In this amiable gentleman were united qualities, which at the present period are rarely found in combination. His loss will be long and widely felt, and must leave a void in society not easy to be filled. His decline was gradual, in the bosom of domestic affection; and his death was a scene of tranquil resignation, the natural and envious close of an innocent and virtuous life.
On Saturday last, in Margaret Street, Cork, Mr. Richard Hurly, aged 70 years.
At Nice, Miss Eliza Sadleir, daughter of the late Nicholas Sadleir, Esq.

between Merckwina and the... Alt Ranstaedt, Lutzen, and the Circle on the other side of the Elster, are ceded to Prussia, which including the Bishopric of Reitz, ends at the town of Luckaw—the whole circle of Neustadt, Saxon Henneberg, and the Saxon provinces included in the Prussian territories will fall to Prussia. Considerations for the welfare of the Saxon nation made it desirable that that country should belong entirely to one master.— Nothing was left but this division, in order to unite the claims of Prussia to better security in future, the justice of which could not be denied.

Berlin will in future, be covered by the fortresses of Wittenberg and Torgau. The whole line of the Oder will be in possession of Prussia. The limits of the territories of Buntzlau as far as Hall, which were hitherto irregular, will form a compact territory, and the parts of North Thuring, adapted to cultivation, will be now, for the first time, in a proper state of connection. The passes of the Saale, and the fortresses of Erfurt, will cover the Prussian state on that side. Besides, Prussia will receive in Westphalia, Corvey, Dortmund, the Dukedom of Westphalia, for which Darmstadt will be indemnified on the left bank of the Rhine—the Dukedom of Berg, with the Coia possessions formerly enclosed within it. The ancient states of the Prince of Orange, Der, Hsdamar, Beisfeim, Dilleoberg, and Siegen, for which he will receive new possessions between the Moselle and the Rhine on the Belgian frontier. These countries are very conveniently united into one mass with the whole Prussian territories in Westphalia, as well as in respect to situation as to the industry and skill of the inhabitants of the county of Berg. Lastly, Prussia will receive a large tract of territory on the left bank of the Rhine.

In the improvement of the German constitution, which has become possible by the co operation of Prussia, the military strength of Germany will be increased. If, however, the expectation of the true friends of Prussia have not been fulfilled, it will now appear evident to them how very important it is towards the security of that state, which they admire, to possess no village without the consent and guarantee of the greatest Powers in Europe—lastly, they may be fully convinced, that Prussia's greatest strength will consist in the general esteem and the firm confidence of all nations; and that to those extraordinary exertions of power, which she displayed last year, she unites the greatest moderation and equity, and the truest benevolence and disinterestedness.

LIMERICK—FRIDAY, MARCH 3, 1815.

Since our last the London Journals of Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, have arrived; and by the Dublin papers of Wednesday, we have received by EXPRESS extracts from the London prints of MONDAY.

The intelligence we have obtained by the Express packet is highly important; the late rumour of inevitable war on the continent are now completely at rest; the whole tenor of this intelligence concurs in representing the affairs of the Congress at Vienna as finally arranged, and the peace and tranquility of Europe definitively settled. In our preceding columns will be found detailed the arrangements made for Prussia with respect to Saxony, of which so much has been latterly said.

The close of the American war is proving highly honorable to the British arms. Accounts are said to have been received by Government, of the surrender of New Orleans to the forces in the expedition under Sir Alexander Cochrane and Sir Edward Pakenham—the latter is stated in private letters to have been before the place with 14,000 men, being the whole British strength. An engagement was shortly expected with General Jackson, as he was very near—We look forward with confidence to the result of this battle, which there is every reason to think will be glorious to the British arms.

The corn resolutions went through a committee of the House of Commons, on Thursday night. The debate was of a much greater length than we could possibly even give an outline of. The protecting price was proposed to be made 76s. but on the house dividing on the question, the original sum of 80s. was agreed on by a majority of 144.

It has been pretty generally thought that Lord Whitworth would wish to leave Ireland, at least for a time, in order to get rid of the painful impression of the scenes connected with the late melancholy event of the Duke of Dorset: hence originated the report, circulated a few days since, of an intended change in the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. These reports, however, have since been altogether discountenanced; and, it was said, that the business of the Lord Lieutenant would be transacted by Lords Justices, according to former precedents, during the temporary absence before alluded to. But the prevailing idea at present is, that as so much time has elapsed since the lamentable event, the consoling influence of time will have rendered even a temporary absence unnecessary.—London Pilot.
