

CITY COURT—SATURDAY.

SENTENCE ON MR. AND MRS. HOLLAND.

The Hon. Justice Perrin entered the Court at a few minutes after nine o'clock, at which time the interior was crowded to excess in every part by a most respectable and anxious auditory. Every position, whence a view of the proceedings could by possibility be obtained, was occupied long before that, and the most intense anxiety prevailed to hear the sentence on the prisoners.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland came into Court punctually at the hour appointed by the Judge, and took their seats at the foot of the witness table, with the same embarrassed air as appeared to mark their demeanour and bearing throughout the trial.

His Lordship having taken his seat on the Bench, the prisoners were desired to stand up, and the Clerk of the Crown having read the indictment upon two counts of which they had been found guilty, enquired if they had anything to say, and informed both the parties that they were now ready to hear it.

No answer having been returned by either of the prisoners, His Lordship, in a feeling manner, addressed them as follows:—

Philip Henry Holland and Frances Holland—You have been indicted in several numbers for that you made an assault on one Mary Anne Alcock, she being a child of tender years, and a servant under the controul of you, Philip Henry Holland, and with divers whips, rods and cords, did beat, assault and wound the said child, so as to inflict grievous bodily harm on her; you have been also indicted for assaulting and wounding the said child, and in like manner for assaulting Henry Pugolas and cruelly using him, so as to inflict on him grievous bodily harm, he being a servant under the controul of you, Philip Henry Holland, and you have been tried by a County Jury of your own selection, and after an ample investigation, a most able and ingenious defence, a full and deliberate trial, you have been convicted in those several numbers, of cruelly ill-using those children who were committed to your care, and whom it was your bounden duty to protect. I deeply regret to say, that you have abused the authority which the relation of master and servant conferred on you, as regarded your position with respect to those poor children—a relation wherein the faithful discharge of its duties and obligations is of the deepest importance to the comfort, happiness and well being of the society at large, and in that position wherein you are enabled to see the great advantage of discharging those obligations which, when well and faithfully performed, produce the most grateful return in the kindly disposition and happy temper of those to whom they are directed. Whatever view we take of your conduct, whether in respect to the mere interests of the master, or the improved condition of a large body of our fellow-creatures—namely, our domestic servants—a class of whom, I am sorry to say, it is but too common to decry—you contribute largely to our comforts in this respect, and bear a heavy share of its burdens; it is your duty to protect that class from the caprices of passion, gusts of passion, and overhearing cruelty and domestic tyranny and unrestrained feelings, which would frequently be the means of inflicting on them cruel and unlawful punishment. It is now my painful duty to pronounce the sentence of the law.—With respect to you, Philip Henry Holland, your offence is aggravated by the circumstance of your countenancing and encouraging your wife, in the commission of those acts of cruelty, instead of exercising the advice and wholesome restraint, which your duty towards her counselled and admitted. The sentence of the Court, therefore, is, that you Philip Henry Holland, and you Frances Holland, shall be imprisoned for the space of NINE CALENDAR MONTHS, and that you be each kept One Week in solitary confinement, and that you Philip Henry Holland do pay a Fine to Her Majesty of FIVE HUNDRED POUNDS.
