WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9.
WITH THIS DAY'S IMPRESSION WE GIVE A SUPPLEMENT OF TEN COLUMNS.

On Thursday night, several full-grown ash trees were cut and taken away from off the demesne of Ballydaniel, the property of Doctor Furlong. On search being made the next day, several pieces of the timber were discovered concealed under water, in a dyke contiguous to said lands.

Twelve Sheep were maliciously stripped of their wool, on the lands of Cahirhennessy, near Ballingarry, on Saturday night last, the property of poor farmers.

The Grand Jury of the County of Clare have granted compensation for the malicious burning of the Out- Offices belonging to Mrs. O'Brien, at Woodfield. It is much to be regretted, that any act of outrage should have been committed on the property of a Lady whose boun- ties to the poor of that district have been immense, and whose name has been associated with all that is kind and benevolent. It must therefore have been the act of some wicked demon, and we find that a subscription has been entered into, in order to bring the perpetrator to that punishment which such an offence merits.

On Sunday night, a School-master of the name of O'Kelly, supposed in a state of intoxication, returning from Newcastle to Castlenahon, missed his way, and got into a dyke of water and mud where he was unfor- tunately smothered. An inquest was held on the body by John Cox, Esq. Coroner.
