Saturday, Mr. Joseph Worthington, of Clare street, Civil Engineer, to Miss Sarah Johnston, of Rutland-street.

DEATHS.

On Sunday, at her grandfather's, Archdeacon Maunsell, in George's street, Thomastown, the beloved daughter of Major Vandeleur, of Cragbeg, in this County—a dear, interesting child.

Saturday night, at Lower Mallow-street, Deborah C. the eldest and dearly beloved daughter of Samuel Evans, Esq. Her sufferings, great and of long continuance, were borne with the meek resignation of a pious Christian. Never was she heard to mourn or repine at the painful afflictions which God had laid so heavily upon her; but rather she rejoiced at the trials which her Heavenly Father had visited her with, and she thanked Him for endowing her with power to triumph over the pains of death and the terrors of the grave. Her life was spent in doing good, and being useful to those in distress. Virtue was her ruling principle in this life—faith and hope her unerring guide in her journey to the next. Her end was peace, for she fell asleep in Jesus, with a well founded assurance of waking to everlasting happiness and glory. Her memory will ever be sincerely and fondly cherished by her sorrowing family and many friends, and her bright example, looked upon by those who knew her as one worthy of imitation.

On Wednesday last, at his residence, Crow Hill House, near Newmarket-on-Fergus, John Coffey, Esq. to the deep and inexpressible grief of his family and a numerous circle of friends. His unbending rectitude and straightforward conduct obtained for him the respect and regard of all. The sympathy evinced for the death of this worthy gentleman must be some consolation to his afflicted relatives.

Gifted with talents of the first order—improved by a long course of study at our native University—possessed of great and varied accomplishments—gentle and refined in manner—kind and affectionate in disposition—seldom indeed has the grave closed over one more sincerely beloved, or more deeply regretted by his bereaved family and a large circle of sorrowing friends.
