slaughtering and burial of the geese on the spot: hence, the 'Goose's Corner'.

KENNEDY'S BRIDGE

A short distance downstream of Athlunkard Bridge, on the Limerick side, can be seen a small single arched bridge; this is all that remains of an attempt to build a bridge across the river by a wealthy merchant named Kennedy. The undertaking was well advanced when the might of the river asserted itself and the project was abandoned. The arch is till known as 'Kennedy's Bridge'.
