Wednesday evening, the Palliskerry car returning from this city, heavily laden, came up with the car of a man named Michael M. Namara, near Mungret, in which himself and a servant boy were returning from the market, where they had sold potatoes. The servant, who held the reins, was not disposed to make way for the passenger-car, and continued at a brisk trot to keep pace with it; but on a narrow part of the road having to pull on one side, he drove over a heap of broken stone, and the sudden jerk threw off his master; the wheel of the other vehicle instantly passed over his head and left him a corpse on the road. He was at once removed to the police station at Cunigar, but aid was unavailing. An inquest was held next day by the Mayor, and a verdict of accidental death returned. The deceased, who was a comfortable farmer, has left a wife and several children to lament his melancholy fate.
