

of living flame, reflecting upon the eye of the steady blaze of the burning pile. Hills and rising grounds, for miles round were spectators, who beheld, in profound and stupified the terrific devastation of that princely castle, nurseries had resided some of the most illustrious.

er is painful beyond description, for we find, in of Shane's Castle, the north of Ireland has lost its celebrated ornaments; and doubtless a young noble for his virtues, must be plunged into a degree of mental suffering, as well as personal.

—Belfast Chronicle

Y. MAY 22.—On Friday morning last, the Mr. Grant, with another person, called at the Mr. Levinge, of Belview, in this county, Esq. asked liberty to pass through his demesne, being a "short cut." Mr. L. desired his servant to go pass understanding from him that they were not to pass. In a short time after, Mr. Levinge, in their description, suspected who they really were, and informed him of the transaction. Mr. Levinge set out in pursuit, and near Bally- "unkenelled" Grant and his companion, but mounted on Mr. Staple's famous hunters, which ran out of his stable the night before, left them all behind. The pursuit was continued active and for about three miles, by Mr. Levinge and Mr. Grant, led by the country people. At this crisis G. with a party of eight or nine dragoons, came in and his companion, and instantly joined in such was the facility of escape they enjoyed their horses, that they distanced all their pursuers of Allen, and immediately dismounted, and Passes there, which Grant is well acquainted after an active pursuit of upwards of six miles, Gains, for the present, escaped.

It is now continually affording us examples to coming economists, and if we are to conform to of things arising from peace in Europe, we must whatever reluctance the commencement may be prudent man will curtail his expenditure in a ratio. Our views at this moment are directed our prejudice in the English to drink foreign ex—a prejudice which we think must be in a e of correction so soon as they are acquainted with the discovered fact, that the prodigious yield of the Turkey red or black Raisins will produce healthy substitute, and cost only at the rate of bottle, when made in their own houses, at any year, under the direction of our fair country, is then subject to no Tax. The process is very a 20 gallon vessel take 100 pounds of Raisins; slice chop them grossly, and put them into an e wide than deep; add two parts in three of ean, and let them stand 15 days, stirring them y; then strain and press them, putting aside runs from them; add the remainder of the raisins that have thus been pressed, and let it in one week, frequently stirring them as before, the liquor, and add to it what you first collect- th runnings into your vessel, together with one y. When the liquor in the barrel has done the vessel close, and let it stand till fit to be greater the quantity which the vessel holds, and kept in the wood, the better it will be.
