ARE "HOLD-UP."

Firing at Civic Guards.

John and Thomas Minogue were indicted at the Central Criminal Court on an indictment with having, on 1923, fired at Civic Guards and John Donnellan at Clare, with intent to do harm.

The prosecutor stated that he and Guard were in the neighbourhood of Mills on the night in question, when the defendants, who were armed with a shotgun, one of them wearing a mask, ordered them to put up their hands and surrender their bicycles, uniforms and money. They refused, and after a short struggle they were fired, and the witness was wounded and beaten. The prisoners were denied the charge.

The prisoners were allowed to agree to a verdict, and were allowed out on bail until their trial on the 11th inst.

Mr Moran, City State Solicitor, said these were preliminary cases, and he wished it to be understood that the Act would be vigorously enforced.

All the defendants admitted the offence. Kate Troy said it was all the hens' fault.

Mr. Moran—Blame the hens if you like, but the eggs will have to be kept clean.

The Justice said as these were preliminary cases he would only impose a fine of 10s and £1 in each case. After this warning in future cases he would impose the maximum.

Mrs Mary Anne McInerney, Lock Quay, was summoned at the suit of the Ministry of Fisheries for sending a salmon which was unclean and not fit for sale to an English firm.

Mr A. Blood-Smyth, solicitor, who appeared for the prosecution, said that in order to prove the case it would be necessary for two witnesses to come from England, and this would entail heavy costs, but there was no necessity for this as the defendant desired to plead guilty. It would only be fair to mention that Mrs McInerney carried on this business of dealing in salmon for the past forty years, and there was never a previous conviction.

The Justice said owing to defendant's good record he would only impose the minimum fine of £2.

DEATH OF MISS JULIA McMAHON.

The death of Miss Julia McMahon, which took place at her residence, Thomondgate, recently, has been learned with sincere regret in the city, where she was well known and highly esteemed by a wide circle of friends. She had only been ailing a fortnight, and her demise, at an early age, was altogether unexpected. The late Miss McMahon was a member of an old and esteemed family, and, like her brother and sisters, took a prominent part in the Gaelic revival movement almost since its inception in the city. She was a young lady of a very kindly disposition, and the funeral on Monday from St. Munchin's Church for Mount St. Laurence Cemetery was large and representative, and a fitting tribute to her memory. The chief mourners were—Mr Peter McMahon, brother; Misses Madge and Lil McMahon, sisters; Mr P. Conlan, uncle; Messrs. P. Doyle, J. Kelly (Cork), and Mrs J. Shannon, relatives; and Mr Alec McCarthy. The clergy present were—Rev. Fr. Halpin, C.C., St. Munchin's; Rev. Fr. Moloney, C.C., do.; Rev. Fr. Kerr, C.S.S.R.; Rev. Fr. Reynolds, C.S.S.R.; Rev. Fr. Jerome, O.F.M., and Rev. Fr. Fintan, O.F.M. Fr. Halpin officiated at the grave.

meeting the letter addressed to Mr Smith by Mr Evan Williams, the of the Mining Association of Great Britain. This document emphasises the serious consequences of the mining dispute on the coal trade, and suggests that four or five representatives of the mine owner should meet on an equal basis of agreement.

The Belgian delegates announce they had resolved to continue their protest upon the shipping of coal to Great Britain.
