(1) Originally Aostrimaighe the territory of the clan O'Chouaine (O'Gunnings). Their chief seat was Castleconnell (Caislean ui Chonaine). They were dispossessed by the O'Briens of Thomond, who in turn had to give place to the Bourkes. William de Burgh got a grant of Castleconnell and a large part of Clanwilliam from King John. This barony and the barony of Clanwilliam in Tipperary, known as West and East Clanwilliam, got their names from William FitzAdelan de Burgh, who lived at Athassel and founded the Augustinian Abbey there, A.D. 1200.

(2) This was William, sixth Lord Castleconnell. He joined the Confederate Catholics in 1642 and sat in the General Assembly in Kilkenny. He raised and commanded a regiment of horse against the Parliament, and when his estates were confiscated he joined King Charles in his exile, and served in the Duke of York's regiment. On the restoration his attainder was reversed and his estates were restored in part. His grandson, the eighth Lord, cast in his lot with James II, was attainted, and lost all his estates. He died without issue in France, 1697.

(3) Theobald Bourke, grandson of the first Lord Castleconnell, was created Baron Brittas in 1618. In 1642 he joined the Confederate Catholics, and, in due course, had his estates confiscated, and was transplanted into Connaught. "We, the said Commissioners, hereby certify that Theobald Bourke, Lord Baron of Brittas, in the County of Limerick, hath, upon the 19th day of November, 1653, delivered unto us in writing the names of himself and such other persons as are to remove with him, etc. The said Theobald Lord Brittas, aged 75 years, red-gray hair, slender face. The Lady Margaret (his wife), gray hair, slender face. Margaret and Mary (granddaughters), daughters of Sir John Bourke, etc., etc." Lord Brittas died in 1654 and was succeeded by his son, Sir John Bourke, whose son, Theobald, third Lord Brittas, threw in his lot with James II, and was attainted.

(4) Joseph Stepney, of Abington, was High Sheriff of the County Limerick in 1686. He built a mansion house there out of the materials of the ruined Cistercian Abbey. His son, Thomas, of Kilmarnock, Co. Dublin, had the grant of the castle and lands of Brittas enrolled—at a Crown rent of £2 16s. 10½d.—July, 6th, 1703.

(5) William Bourke, of Dromkeen, married, before 1640, a daughter of McKeogh, of Rivers, whose sisters were married to, respectively, Bourke of Ballynagarde, and Bourke of Kishyquirke. The Bourkes of Dromkeen were known as "Slogh Meyler," and were descended from Edward McWilliam Oughter. John Bourke, who died in 1440, got Dromkeen and one-third of Clanwilliam from the Bourkes of Castleconnell in exchange for his wife's dowry in Coshmagh, she was an O'Brien of Thomond. Richard Bourke, of Dromkeen, conformed in the time of Charles I, took Orders, and changed the family name to Burgh. His son, Ulick (improperly anglicised Ulisses), was Rector of Grean and Dean of Emly. He gave very material assistance to William III during his siege of Limerick, and was made by him, in 1692, Bishop of Ardagh. His tomb is in Dromkeen ruined church.

(6) Sir George Ingoldsby, Knt., was a colonel in the Cromwellian army, and was fifth son of General Sir Richard Ingoldsby, Bart., whose mother was Oliver Cromwell's aunt. His brother, General Sir Henry Ingoldsby, was Military Governor of Limerick, and married Anne, daughter of Sir Hardress Waller, of Castletown. Sir Henry got large grants of lands in Limerick, Clare, and Tipperary. This branch became extinct in 1726. Sir George Ingoldsby married the daughter and heiress of James Goold, of Ludden Castle. He was M.P. for Limerick City in 1658, and Mayor in 1672. His son, General Richard Ingoldsby, of Ballybricken Court, was M.P. for Limerick from 1703 to his death in 1713, and his son, Colonel Henry Ingoldsby, was M.P. from 1723 to 1731, when he died, leaving a daughter, who married, in 1743, Hugh Fitzjohn Massy, of Duntryleague. Their grandson, Hugh Ingoldsby Massy, dying without issue, these large estates were sold by his heir, Lord Massy, in 1812.

(8) This Barony included the ancient territory of the O'Ciarmhaic (O'Kerwick, anglicised Kirby) of Aine Cliach, who were subject to, and paid tribute to the kings of Cashel. The earls of Desmond acquired this district at a comparatively early date, and made it almost an independent county, and thus it came to be called the "Small County" of Limerick.

(9) The O'Hurleys possessed considerable landed property in the east of Limerick county for several centuries. Maurice Hurley of Knocklong and Killduffe, who died in 1637, according to an inquisition taken early in the reign of James I, held Knocklong, Hammonstown, Longstone, etc., in free socage from Gibbon Fitzgibbon, Macatan Riddery; also Ballyscadane and Rathellan. From the White Knight he held the townland of Glanlarlie Kilduff Castle near Pallasgrean and other denominations of land he held by patent from the king. Maurice was succeeded by his eldest son, Thomas, whose son, Sir Maurice, now lost for ever the family estate.

(10) William Fitton of Aney was grandson of one of the undertakers of that name (see Journal, No. 1, p. 11). Sir Edward Fitton had a grant of 12,000 acres, and his nephews, Richard and Alexander, 3,000 acres of the Desmond estates. Sir Edward held Glenogra Castle and lands, on lease from Sir George Bouchier of Lough Gur, and was high sheriff of the county in 1598. We find, now after a lapse of little more than fifty years, these lands again confiscated and granted to the Cromwellian adventurers.

(11) Richard Coote was grandson of General Sir Charles Coote (the elder), and brother to General Sir Charles Coote (the younger), who was created Earl of Mount-rath on the Restoration. Richard was created Baron Coote of Colooney, by patent dated September 6th, 1660, and received large grants of land in the east of the county of Limerick. His son was created earl of Bellamont, by William III, for his services. The Cootes of Ash Hill, Kilmallock, and Mount Coote, are descended from his younger brother, Chidley Coote, a lieutenant-colonel in Cromwell's army.

(12) Donogh O'Grady of Kilballyowen got the title to his estate confirmed by James I. He died in 1653, leaving by his wife—a daughter of Sir Thomas Brown of Camas—a son, Darby of Kilballyowen, who married Faith, daughter of Sir Thomas Standish, who had got a grant of the de Lacy estate about Bruff. By this connection O'Grady preserved his estate at Kilballyowen; although other members of the family had their confiscated. Darby O'Grady's sister was married to Gibbon Fitzgibbon, Macatan Riddery, of Ballynahinche, who now lost his estates. Their grandson, Maurice Fitzgibbon, a captain in the army of James II, was killed in a duel by his cousin, Darby Grady, the founder of the Elton family, A.D. 1699

(13) Colonel John Baggot of Baggotstown was a member of the General Assembly of Confederate Catholics, and held a high position in the Irish Army. He was in the city of Limerick during Ireton's siege in 1657. Both he and his son Maurice now had their estates confiscated.

(15) I find James Rawley a freeholder on the estate of Mr. Edward Fitton in a return dated 1592, and in 1598 he was tenant of Lough Gur castle and adjacent lands to Sir George Bouchier. This James Rawley, or Raleigh, was said to be uncle to Sir Walter Raleigh. He built a spacious castellated mansion close to the river Camogue, in the parish of Caherorney, adjoining Lough Gur, on the townland still retaining his name—Rawleystown. Ellen Rawley, widow of Richard of Rawleystown, was a daughter of Lacy of Bruff; she and her children, Edward and Margaret, held considerable landed property in this and the adjoining parishes, all now confiscated. Near relatives, Richard and Edmond Raleigh of Ballynamona Castle, also lost their estates, which adjoined those of O'Grady of Kilballyowen, with whom Edmond had a dispute, and in a duel with swords cut off O'Grady's arm. This was Thomas, eldest son of Darby O'Grady of Kilballyowen. Among those transplanted gentry from the county Limerick are to be found the names of Edmond Rawley of Rawleystown, and Edmond and Richard Rawley of Ballynamona. Walter Rawley was not an uncommon name in this district up to a recent date.
