PARISH OF KILBEMENY

Kilbeahanny Ph.	-- Sketch Map	1
Cill Bheithine, Behenny's Church.
Kilbeheny	-- J. O'D.
Killbeghney	-- Barony Map

Bounded on the N. by the Ph. of Clonbeg, Co. Tipperary; E. by Ballyporeen Ph. in same county; S. by Mitchelstown Ph., Co Cork; and on the W. by the Phs. of Galbally and Ballylanders (Co. Limerick) and Marshalstown Ph. (Co. Cork).

This parish forms a small projecting wing of the County of Limerick between Co. Tipperary and Co. Cork. It occupies the extreme south-east portion of the Barony of Coshlea, and contains 15,369 acres, statute measure. The Funcheon River so circles round the parish as to trace the main part of the boundary with both Tipperary and Cork counties. The parish in general may be said to consist of arable land, interspersed with mountain and portions of rough pasture. There is very little bog. A well planted glen extends among the hills to the Galtee Mountains, on the highest of which, called Galtee More, is a lake. There are several roads through the parish, & the remains of the ancient church still stand on the N. bank of the R. Funcheon.
