This is the best information we have been able to obtain on this horrid affair. Some of the circumstances attending it are extraordinary.

It is extraordinary that when his friends lighted Mr. Doker to the lower landing, he could possibly be supposed to fall out of a window. It is not at least probable. It is equally amazing, that if he was attacked by an assassin at the front door, that even the effects of anger and violence did not convey an alarm in the very committing of the fatal deed.—The conduct of Hurley and wife's testimony is equally inexplicable; and the ignorance of the surrounding centinels, each within hearing of every noise, form altogether a scene of mystery which time alone can explain.

Mr. Doker was a very fine young fellow, well esteemed in the regiment, and respected by all who knew him.

Extract of a letter from Dingle, August 24.
"On Sunday night last the Right Boys of part of the county erected a gallows within a mile of the town, where it still stands. Scarce a night passes that those misguided people do not assemble for the purpose of swearing the inhabitants, and, as they say, of redressing grievances."

C O R K, Aug. 25.

24. Wind N. W. Arrived, Two Brothers of Southampton, Gutherall, Youghall bricks, &c.—Sailed, Martha Magdela, Peterfon, St. Ubes, ballast; Gideon Bassett, Newberry-port, ballast, and sail cloath.
On the night of the 22d inst. as Mr. Hickey, Guager of Tomgraney, was returning from his walk to Killaloe, he was attacked by two villains, one of whom seized his horse by the reins, and swore he would have his life, Mr. Hickey, however, setting spurs to his horse, overthrew the assailant, while the other felon discharged a pistol, but without effect.

agely pursued him two miles, though in vain, when tired of the pursuit they returned and swore the remaining valuator never more to value tythes for Clergymen or Proctors, and dismissed him with particular commands to his escaped comrade, never to value tythes, on pain of losing his ears and nose.

Last Thursday a match was run over the Course at Newcastle, between Mr. Royse's bay horse Pickpocket, and Mr. Henn's bay mate, three four-mile heats, which was won by the latter.

Yesterday morning early between the hours of twelve and one of the clock, the Right Boys, two hundred at least in number, mounted on-horses and well armed with guns, pistols, and swords, paid a visit to the Parishioners of Fedamore with an intent to punish such of them as dealt for Tythes, though purchased at their own rates.—Fortunately those poor objects of their resentment happened not to be at home, having lain for several nights abroad under hedges and ditches, to avoid the resentment of those merciless blood hounds. Their first attack was on the house of Thos Mason, Parish Clerk of Fedamore, against whom their fury is particularly pointed, and not finding him at home, 6 poor children one of them on the breast, could not protect their mother, his wife, from their rage, as they struck her with the butt end of a pistol and knocked her down, afterwards they broke in the doors of several other houses in search of persons, and administered oaths where ever they went—Surely those and such other acts of unexampled violence and barbarity should, ere it is too late, rouse Government and the Gentlemen of the Country (without whose co-operations nothing can be done) to unite in such exertions as may speedily restore peace and good order to this distracted country, where tumults riot and every species of wantonness and cruelty have arrived to such an alarming pitch, that the peaceable inhabitants are afraid to lie in their beds by night or to travel the roads by day.

Last night a congratulatory address of the Mayor, Common Council and Citizens of this City, was sent to his Grace the Duke of Rutland, to be transmitted to his Majesty.

Married. Last Saturday, Thomas Vincent, Esq; one of the Burgesses of this city, to the daughter to Mr. Ben. Unthank, merchant.

Died. Last Thursday at Castletown, Mrs. Conyers, wife of Charles Conyers, the elder, Esq; a Lady who discharged all the relative duties of life, with that dignity which characterizes the best of women. Her death will be long felt and long lamented by her family, and by the poor, to whom she was a generous benefactress: Her remains were interred on Friday, in the family vault in Castle-town Church.—The 3d. Instant at Nantes, John Clanchy, Esq; late of this City, a gentleman of the strictest honour and probity; he lived universally beloved, and died regretted by a numerous and respectable acquaintance.
