FATHER MATHW IN KILRUSH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

SIR—This great and good man has kindly promised to preach the Consecration sermon at the opening of the new Catholic Chapel of Kilrush, on the first Sunday of Advent, the 29th day of November next. It is only 18 months since the foundation stone was laid by the Lord of the soil, Crofton Moore Vandeleur, Esq. Within the very short period since then, through the exertions of Rev. Mr. Kenny, coupled with the spirit of the parishioners, (especially those in the town) a superb edifice, long wished for and wanted, is in finish: and in the opinions of the many respectable Kilkee visitors, from Limerick and elsewhere, who turned in to view it as they passed through, is to be admired as much for its vast extent—its architecture, and durability, as for the rapidity of its erection. Without galleries it can conveniently accommodate 4000 full grown persons—120 feet long—the same in transepts—walls 3 feet thick and 40 feet high—the architecture speaks for itself; and in a language peculiarly its own, tells to the eye of the scientific beholder, how much is due from Kilrush to the talent of William H. Owen. The Very Rev. Mr. Mathew has deferred his visit to this district, waiting this occasion to show the esteem he entertains for the people of Kilrush, and of which he made public mention more than once, on account of their early accession and fast fidelity to the great cause of total abstinence.

A SUBSCRIBER.

stone of the Collegiate Institution, at Liverpool to-morrow, is a magnificent affair. It is composed of solid silver, with ivory handle. The arms, motto, and crest of the Derby family are engraven upon it, with the following inscription:—Presented to the Right Hon. Lord Stanley, M.P. on the occasion of his laying the foundation stone of the Liverpool Collegiate Institution.

Father Mathew preached at Gort Chapel, on Sunday, in behalf of the Roman Catholic Schools, and left £120 in local charities.

On Saturday the Rev. Mr. Mathew arrived in Sligo, for the purpose of administering the Temperance pledge, and during Sunday the town presented a most animated appearance. The teetotallers, to the number of 1600, waked in procession to the chapel, and on Sunday evening, and the subsequent evenings, the temperance band played round the town. The vast multitudes from all directions, who flocked in to take the pledge, exceeded any notion previously formed of the matter. In his addresses to the people, he exhorted them to avoid all political and religious disputes—to cultivate a spirit of good will, of christian charity to their neighbours of every persuasion—to avoid all secret societies, and those emissaries who go about inducing persons to take unlawful oaths, and then betraying their dupes to the authorities. There was a moral sublimity deeply impressive in the spectacle of so many thousand human beings influenced by one man, and on their knees repeating after him the words of the Temperance pledge. Previous to his departure the Rev. Gentleman presented Rev. Mr. Feeny with £100 donation for the poor of the parish, and £20 to buy instruments for the teetotal band, and to the Society's fund he gave £10. The money received for medals and cards, the Sligo Journal says, could not amount to less than £2000! Seventy-five publicans are retiring from business in the town.

If the meeting gave him cash or security for the £200, he would not object, but otherwise he was determined to persevere in his opposition. The meeting assured him they would make the money good and repeated their promises to pay the £200 but he would not be content, saying he had counsel's opinion that the grant could not be under the new Act, and the assembly broke up in disorder as no arrangement was made satisfactory to the Prelate.
