The thirty-fifth regiment, and its illustrious commander.

On this toast being given, the Lord Lieutenant again rose, returning thanks in the name of his regiment, praising its high military character, and expressing his pride at so many Irishmen being in its ranks. At the same time his Grace took occasion to grow his attachment to Ireland, which should ever be dear to his heart. "I call myself now," said his Grace, "an Irishman. I have lived so long among you, that I feel myself as thoroughly belonging to Ireland as to the other parts of the empire."

The health of the late Lord Mayor was given and received with that testimony of regard and respect which his conduct in his high office so justly merited.

The city Representatives—the county Representatives—the city of Dublin—the linen manufacture—the Duchess of Richmond, the patroness of the Irish loom.

His Grace the Lord Lieutenant then requested permission to give the health of

The new chief magistrate. Our countryman Mr. Kelly, obliged the guests with a very delightful song, and Mr. Spray sang in his best style, particularly "God bless the old King," which at the request of the Duke of Richmond, was encored.

CATHOLIC MEETING.

On the 23d ult. a numerous and highly respectable meeting of the catholic freeholders of the county of Westmeath, was held in the court-house, at Mullingar, upon which occasion several protestant gentlemen attended, when Gerald Dease, Esq. was called to the chair. Edm. Nugent, Esq. proposed the resolutions, which were seconded by Christopher Nangle, Esq. and carried unanimously.

The following gentlemen were appointed to prepare their petitions to both Houses of Parliament, with directions to confer with the general committee of the catholics of Ireland:—

Richard Raynell, Esq. a protestant gentleman, of high respectability, addressed the meeting to the following purport:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen—I feel highly gratified at the opportunity I have this day of expressing my sentiments upon the occasion of this meeting, and which I am convinced are perfectly in unison with those of my protestant brethren here present.

Proudly, gentlemen, do I acknowledge that you have my most cordial wishes for the success of the object of this assembly, and however immatured I may appear before you, I feel myself imperiously called upon to express my sentiments as a liberal protestant, lamenting, in conjunction with every feeling and sensible man of my persuasion, that our catholic countrymen were mile-house, he was attacked near the later place by two miscreants, the first of whom, when passing, knocked him down with a stick, both closing on him in an instant and after giving this unoffending man a severe beating, took his bayonet (the only weapon he had about him,) and escaped across the fields. This daring outrage took place at Killanry, within half a mile of a military station, where there are not less than forty men (cavalry and infantry), quartered; but where it is to be regretted, since the death of Mr. Elliott, there is no civil officer or magistrate, which renders the military in this quarter inefficient, as they cannot act without orders.—Colonel A. du.

In a few hours after the attack upon the soldier, a large body of men went to the house of Mr. Tobin, of Spring mount, within about half a mile of the place where the soldier was robbed, and ransacked the house, carrying away four stand of arms and his horse in triumph.—Ibid.
