these Colours from me?" The unanimous reply was, "we are." "Will you stand by them, and maintain their insignia, unsullied through the battle field?" "We will," which reply was followed by three cheers. The Major-General then said he had performed a duty which was to him the most pleasing one of his life, and expressed his sense of the honor which he himself felt in its performance. The new Colours were deposited in Col. MacBean's quarters; and, in the course of the evening, the old ones were brought, under an escort of Colour-serjeants, to the Mess-room, where they remained during the evening's entertainment, at which the Major-General was present. There were many gratified spectators of the martial ceremony, as the weather held up fine.

The 84th, or York and Lancaster Regiment, bear conspicuously on their appointments the Union Rose, an emblem of those Royal houses, whose rival claims long shook the empire to its centre, until they amicably subsided in the person and reign of Henry the 7th; also, as commemorative of the Regiment's services, the honorary badges, "Nive, Peninsula, and India."

The Serjeants Mess-room was fitted up on this occasion; several beautiful drawings of military heroes were prominent; at the extremity of the room was placed a likeness of the lamented hero, Sir John Moore. The Queen occupied the front, around which drawing several small lamps were suspended, and forming at the top a crown. The Major-General expressed his approbation of the taste displayed in the arrangement of the room. In the evening the entire of the Sergeants of the Regiment, with those of the Scots Greys, and Sergeants belonging to the several Regiments recruiting at Kilkenny, sat down to a very elegant dinner. Col. MacBean, attended by Adjutant Seymour, shortly afterwards entered the room, when his health, coupled with the officers of the Regiment, was drunk, which elicited a burst of applause. He was pleased to drink wine, and express his satisfaction at seeing his non-commissioned officers so happy. He said he trusted they would continue to merit his esteem, and pursue a line of conduct which would ensure to them the advantages arising from their place in society.

The only cotemporary in the 84th Regt. of the late Lieut. and Adjutant Archdeacon, is Captain M'Crear, a veteran officer, who served with the deceased in the Peninsular war.

The inspection of the 48th Depot at Templemore, by Major-General Sir William Macbean, passed off remarkably well, every thing connected with the economy and discipline of that handsome corps being found regular and soldierlike. Sir William expressed his best approbation of the appearance of the men, their marching and steadiness under arms. The Major-General dined at the officers' mess.

A Brevet promotion in both services is anxiously looked forward to at the approaching marriage of her Majesty.

An alarm of fire in the ship-building yard of Messrs. J. N. Russell and Sons, next the patent-slip, at the North Strand, was suddenly heard at 12 o'clock on Saturday night, from the watchman in the concern, and the Franciscan Chapel bell at the opposite side of the river, rung out for help to the scene of danger. The flames were blazing in the office on the premises, amidst a great heap of combustible materials, such as tar, rosin, pitch, oakum and timber. Many persons hastened to the spot, but amongst the very first were Capt. Cotter, Capt. Vernon, of the Jim Crowe, and Capt. White, of the Dover Castle. The watchman burst in the door of the office to save the account books from the conflagration, but which was effected with much difficulty, for a vigilant dog within caught the intruder, and held him firmly, until assistance came up to relieve him from the faithful brute. Alderman Jervis, Capt. Macquarrie, Scots Greys, Mr. Langford, Chief Constable Clements and Police, and several ship masters used the most active and strenuous efforts to check the flames, in which they were powerfully aided by the West of England fire engine, and ultimately they got the fire under; for had it spread, many thousand pounds worth of property would have been sacrificed, as there are not only new vessels on the stocks, but others on the Slip, for repairs.—The damage is computed at about £400. The concerns are insured in the Caledonia Company.

The operations of the Ordnance Survey of Ireland are considerably retarded by the excessive bad weather, as great part of the country is under water. Killarney registry has terminated, and after all the exhortations of Mr. O'Connell, and the exertions of his travelling agent, Counsellor Bullen, what is the result—46 votes for the Conservatives, and 60 for the Liberals. The Conservative Gentlemen who attended in Killarney were Arthur Blennerhasset, Esq. M. P. Henry A. Herbert, M'Gillycuddy of the Reeks, Richard T. Herbert, Denis M'Cartie and John M'Cartie, Esqrs.

At Quarter Sessions for Conemara, at Clifden, before William D. Freeman, Esq. Assistant-Barrister, there were 162 notices of Registry for the tenantry of John D'Arcy, Esq. of Clifden. It appeared, however, that the necessary forms required by the statute were not complied with, the addition of the claimant's trade or calling having been omitted; this defect being relied on by the Conservative agent, his Worship ruled accordingly, and the applications were rejected.

Mr. Nicholson, proprietor of a Roulette table at Ballinasloe, was arrested by Captain Warburton, and a person named Burke appeared to prosecute. The presiding magistrates were—Archdeacon Trench, Captains Warburton and Ireland, and Mr. Jones, S. M. The evidence was not sufficient to establish the case of proprietorship, but a policeman, with whom he had a conversation subsequent to his arrest, proved to his having admitted the table was his, and their Worships having then consulted, the Archdeacon said they had come to the determination of fining Mr. Nicholson, in the mitigated penalty of thirty pounds.

Mr. Vigers, M.P. has arrived at Carlow to attend the registry sessions. Monday, the Kilkenny Citizens' Club passed a vote of confidence in Mr. O'Connell, and pledged themselves to collect the annuity!

A stoker was burned to death last week in the engine-room of the Mercury, Dublin steam packet, at Glasgow.

BATTY'S CIRCUS ROYAL.—We have visited Batty's often, but were never so much pleased as on the representation of the glorious battle of Waterloo, on Monday night. The chief incidents in the piece were the charge of the British—the combat of Shaw, the Lifeguardsmen—the retreat of the French forces—Napoleon pursued by the English cavalry, the Duke of Wellington leading on his forces, and the advance of the Prussians. The character of Molly Molony, the Irish camp follower who attended our army, was well sustained by Moran. The rest of the entertainments were extraordinary, particularly that of Monsieur Massotta on horseback; Mr. H. Walker, on the slack rope, in which he represented the spirit of the wind. The four Swiss Acrobats went through their wonderful feats. Mr. Wilkinson, as the Inca of Peru, displayed the sagacity of the Indian in catching and taming the wild horse. There were other amusements, to which the Clowns, by their comic humour contributed greatly. The house was fashionably attended, and Mr. Batty, as usual, was unremitting in his assiduity for the entertainment of his patrons. The indefatigable Manager, Mr. Stanley, takes his benefit on Friday night, under distinguished patronage.

The communication of Lieut. Durnford, R.E. is received, and shall appear in our next; also Mr. Huguene's letter, with several other articles, &c.

THANKS.
MR. JOHN NORRIS RUSSELL returns his warmest and most sincere thanks to the several Gentlemen and Fellow-citizens, who, with such promptitude, hastened to his Ship-building Yard on Saturday night, and with such kind exertions and skill succeeded in arresting the progress of the fire, which, at one time, threatened destruction to a large amount of property. Mr. RUSSELL regrets that he cannot particularise by name, the several Gentlemen who so kindly came forward on this occasion, fearing he might unintentionally omit any individual, but begs to return thanks for the unsparing exertions of Captain Macquarrie, of the Scots Greys; also, to Mr. Clements, C.C. Police, and to the fine body of young men under his command, who shewed the greatest zeal and unremitting labour in extinguishing the flames, and in protecting his property. Mr. RUSSELL begs also to return thanks to Mr. J. Fogarty for the promptitude with which he brought the West of England Engine to the fire, having turned it out in perfect order a few minutes after he was apprised of the accident, to his great exertion and well known skill in working the Engine, may, in a great part, be attributed the safety of the valuable property which was in such imminent danger. October 16.

DEATHS.
This day, at his brother's house in Patrick-street, Mr. James Grubb, brother of Mr. George Grubb, Woollen Draper, member of the Society of Friends, a young gentleman very much regretted. On Monday evening, deeply and universally regretted, Apha, the beloved wife of the Rev. Thomas Locke, of Newcastle, in this County. In recording the death of this pious and charitable lady, we may truly say with the inspired penman, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." For upwards of 40 years her labours were incessant in relieving the wants of her fellow-creatures, and following the precepts of our Blessed Redeemer, in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick, giving means to release the captive, and to bury the dead. All the respectable shops in the town of Newcastle were closed upon the melancholy occasion of this good lady's death. On Monday, in Upper William-street, at an advanced age, Mr. John Coomy. On Saturday, at Kilrush, of malignant fever, Mr. John Davoren, Woollen Draper. He has left a large young family to deplore his loss. At his sister's house, in Mungret-street, Mr. Edw. M'Dahan. At Passage West, Mary, widow of Rev. J. Quarry, LL.D. At his residence, Adare, in this County, of spotted fever, after a few days illness, Henry Johnston, Esq. M. D., M.R.C.S., at the early age of 38 years, having, at this period, attained a degree of eminence in his profession, united with the most courteous and gentlemanly demeanour, which rendered him the object of regard and esteem in the respectable circle within his district. To the poor in his neighbourhood, he was ever ready to afford his professional aid, as well as pecuniary assistance. His family and connections have long cause to mourn his premature removal, and the vast assemblage of persons and equipments which attended his remains to the family burying ground at St. John's, in this City, on Monday last, fully demonstrated the poignant regret felt by his afflicted relatives, and mourning friends. On Sunday last, at Thomond-gate, to the deep affliction of her husband and friends, and regretted by all who knew her, Christiana, the beloved wife of Thos. Eman, Esq. Supervisor of Excise, At Carnaveagh, county Monaghan, Joseph Cunningham, Esq. Catherine, wife of Mr. John Duffy, of Kingstown. Louisa, wife of Mr. John Barrington. Mr. Florence M'Carthy, Ecclesiastical Student of St. Mary's Seminary, Madras. He was a native of Cork. At Lismanean, county Roscommon, Captain Robert Nolan. At Blenheim Lodge, Waterford, Henry Ridgway, sen. a member of the Society of Friends. At Galway, Sub-Constable Boyde Higginbotham, of that station. Major Johnson, 5th Fusiliers, commanded the band to attend the interment, and bury him with military honours. The Rev. Thos. Hanly, R. C. Curate of Clonsmore, Clonmel. At Rosscarbery, of fever, Mr. Michael O'Connor. At Tramore, the Rev. Michael Murphy, R.C.C. of Lismore. The Rev. John Lowther, P. P. of Rahoon, aged 87 years. Of consumption, Mr. Henry Hammond, Temple-lane. In Park Crescent, Portland-place, of apoplexy, the Dowager Lady Radstock, widow of Admiral Lord Radstock. At Torquay, R. Fitzwilliam De Barry, Esq. M. D. At Salisbury, Anne, relict of the Rev. E. P. Stock. The Rev. N. J. Hollingsworth, M. A. Rector of Boldon. At Ipswich, George Read Dixon, Esq. At Belmont, near Hereford, the Rev. Dr. Richard Prossor, one of the Prebendaries, and late Archdeacon of the Diocese of Durham, aged 92. At Chatham, Augusta, wife of Dr. Piper, of the Provisional Battalion. In the Dockyard, Chatham, Mr. William Hardy, of the Paymaster-General's Office. In Wigmore-street, Capt. John Freeman, late of the H.E.I.C. Naval Service, aged 61. Admiral Sir Peter Hallkett. At Chatham, Augusta, wife of Dr. Piper, of the Provisional Battalion. At Prior Park, Ashby de la Zouche, the Viscountess Tamworth, widow of the late Viscount. At Hensingham, near Whitehaven, Mr. Henry Parke, Printer. At St. John's-hill, Stockport, Catherine Allix, relict of the late Rev. Chas. Waverley Allix, of Mere, Wilts, and daughter of the late Colonel Townley, of Belfield-hall, Lancashire. At Rhiw Rectory, Carnarvonshire, Martha, wife of F.W. Grant, Calder, Esq. 2d Life Guards, and daughter of the late Rev. W. Roberts, A. M. of Galt Breen, same county. At Bombay, William Morley, jun. Esq. Captain in the India Company's Artillery. At Brockville, Upper Canada, John Hunter, youngest son of Ogle Robert Gowan, Esq. M. P. formerly of Dublin. At Barbadoes, Mr. John Briscoe.
