FEALE FISHERIES

High waters in the Feale and its tributaries, the Allaughaun and Oulagh (writes our Abbeyfeale cor- respondent) have facilitated the movement of salmon up the smaller springs and the tributaries in large numbers for spawning. With the continuance of high water, it is not always best when the "Redds" are made by the spawning fish on the margins of the fords, where tame and wild fowl find it easier of access to the ova when the waters are low.
