INQUEST ON PILOT ADJOURN

Flight leader tells of air collision

Residents of Prospect Villas are still discussing the miraculous escape of death they had after the air collision on Saturday afternoon.

On an average, five children would be playing in the garden of the house when the plane ploughed to the ground and not even an explosion could have saved them. The messengers of death, however, missed the children. Most of the children were at the Barracks, where the aeroplanes were to be seen.

Investigations continued until the lanes of the air crash and the aeroplane is to be examined by the Board of the Inquiry. It is understood that the Board will be informed of the circumstances of the crash by the Board of the Inquiry and will examine the aeroplane to find out what happened. The aeroplane is to be examined by the Board of the Inquiry and will examine the aeroplane to find out what happened.
