EBBS.—His attendants having removed called me to examine his eyes, which wide, and rolled about in every direc- e clear, liquid, and expressive. He lids, put his hands upon his hips, gave pened the lids, and in the place of his were two balls as of finely polished l the lids again, strained again, opened and the steel balls were gone, and a d brass ones appeared in their stead. losed the lids, and on re-opening them ith the eyes I had just before exam- the performance of this trick he never l from his hips, and I was the only n. On rising he called to his son, and id before me. He then asked me to refully the youth's left side, to press vily upon it, to rub it upwards and id to be sure that there was no lump n. I did as I was told, and could t the ribs. The father then placed his a a particular spot, and with an in- lancet made a slight puncture, and end of a piece of coarse thread, which smeared at intervals with blood. He raw forth the thread in one piece, forty yards lay upon the ground, and ld go on as long as I wished, or I might self. I declared myself satisfied, and l the thread close to the skin, gave the d nothing remained to show that any een performed.—George Thompson,
