

the question on this motion : there is some misapprehension as to the question decided in the Lax Weir. We are all satisfied that a verdict obtained against two defendants there was an appeal to the Court of Error, or, as it is called in the Statute, "and there a very learned judge of Ireland, determined, and amongst those most eminent judges that either England or Ireland could produce" (hear, hear). The other side brought to the House of Commons a decision against the decision of the House of Lords, and the Lord Chancellor to decide whether an injunction against the defendants from fishing in the Shannon should be granted. It is generally supposed that the Lord Chancellor grants the injunction, but, be that as it may, it is clear that the decision of the House of Commons is of no power beyond these two defendants, and the Lord Chancellor's injunction against the whole of the defendants is of no effect.

and carried, and the following committee to report on the subject:—

Mr. M. B. Ryan, Cooper, &c.
The Committee that, in general, were the better; but this is not the case, because it would have the effect of the case. That the Committee should report, (to-morrow) at the next meeting, their consideration this subject.

AND THE FINE ARTS!
The Committee of the House of Commons, on the 10th inst., reported to the Board that they had endeavoured to teach the children of the Hulla system, and that in three times each week, the cost could be only £16 for the instruction. The rate-payers will be obliged to pay for professors of dancing and music.

From that portion of the revenue now being expended on the people (and oh). Yes, on gas; and on music—(hear,
