
Advertisement Feature

Gift to the Nation

The plans to house the contents of the world-famous Hunt collection in a new museum at the Custom House, Limerick, are going well, according to officials in Limerick.

The project, consisting of a treasury of antiquities and art objects, should be opened in 1994 and is one that is certain to arouse international attention.

The collection was presented as a gift to the Nation by the late John Hunt, an antiquarian and art historian.