night was the Dake of Argyll, that no Government in history had been so corrupt as that of Mr Gladstone's. , There was "nothing that had not been put up to auction to gain a few votes." "The explanation of Mr Gladstone's sudden conversion to Home Rule," said his Grace, "was to be traced to Mr Parnell's policy of worrying and obstructing the House of Commons, and making it ridiculous in the eyes of foreign nations, and to the chance that offered of making a dishonourable alliance with the Irish party, and the Prime Minister's one object throughout the campaign, and the object of his followers, who had followed him with abject servility, had been to take advantage of the universal ignorance that had prevailed upon the subject." The debating power in the Lords is all on one side, nor did subsequent Gladstonian speakers succeed in mending the poor and puny argumentative opening of Lord Spencer.

THE Kilrush people got it into their heads quite recently, on some reports that nobody, seemed to be aware of but themselves, that a guardship was about being placed on the Shannon, and accordjugly worked with a will-and for which they deserve every credit—in order that Scattery might be selected as the place of anchorage. Considering the fact that the forts on the river have been all dismantled, it seems an extraordinary thing that the Lords of the Admiralty do not, in the interests of the public service-to use a stereotyped phrase-place a guard-hip on the Shannon. Independent of the advantage the vessel would be to the people residing in the vicinity of the station, wherever that might be, one would imagine that, under the circumstances we have mentioned at the outset, it would be a prudent stop for the authorities to comply with the representations made to their from various localities along the Shannon. However, from the unfavourable reply given by the Admiralty to the Foynes Guardship Comm thee so far back as the month of June, we were under the impression that some considerable time must clapse before a guardship is seen on the Shandon, notwitustanding the rather confident opinion to the contrary prevailing at Kilrush. In tois we are borne out by the correspondence read at the last meeting of the Towa Commissioners. The Lords of the Admiralty "are unable at the present time to alter the stations of H.M. ships on the coast of Ireland." But we are promised that if the arrangements of the service are changed at any future time "the position of Scattery roadstead will receive careful attention." The proceedings that have taken place both at Formes and Kilrush during the past six months have had the effect or pressing this very important subject home to the authorities, and we have every hope that eventually the movement will be successful, Better late than never.

It is announced that the Regimental Sports of the 10th Royal Hussars, will take at Cahir on the 14th instant.

THE LATE MR. JAMES HARAN, J.P.

The funeral obsequies of this much lamented gentleman took place yesterday. On Tuesday night the remains were removed from his residence, National Bank, to St Michael's Church, and at ten o'clock yesterday morning Mass for the dead was solemnised by Father Cregan, C C, after which the procession started for St Lawrence's Cometery. The contege was of very large proportions, and its representative character afforded sufficient proof of the popularity the deceased gentleman had enjoyed, and the esteem and respect in which he was held. On all sides there were signs of mourning, and nearly all the business houses had their shutters drawn while the procession was passing. The coffin was strewn with beautiful wreaths and immortelles.

The chief mouraers were—Dr J A Haran, and Master Fred Haran, sons of deceased; Mr P Haran, Miltown-Malbay, brother; Inspector-General Haran, R M, uncle, and J P Alton, Inspector National Bank.

FISHING AT KILLALOE.

With reference to a resolution forwarded by the Board asking the Inspectors of Irish Fisheries to immediately hold an inquiry with regard to the fishing at Killaloe sluige gates, a letter was read from the Office of Irish Fisheries stating that an inquiry would be held as soon as possible, but the several fixtures already made for other inquiries would prevent the holding of an early meeting at Killaloe.

The Chairman said of course they had nothing to do but wait until the Inspectors found it convenient to attend

Place said even if an inquiry were held

Mr Place said even if an inquiry were held immediately, any new laws that might be made would not come into force this season.

A further communication was read from the Office of Fisheries, saying that they had considered the application for an enquiry into the question of repealing the by law regulating the length of drift nets in Clouderlaw Bay, and it had been decided to hold an inquiry when the opportunity parmits. opportunity permits.

The Chairman said that letter disposed of Mr Gibson's notice of motion requesting the In-spectors to hold such an inquiry.

DECREASE IN THE SALMON FISH.

following communication from the Banagher fishermen was read:—

"We, the undersigned fishermen of Banagher, wish to bring under the notice of your board at their next meeting to what extent the salmon-fishing has fallen away this year. There are at present five men engaged salmon-fishing for their daily support on the Banagher fords, and the take for the past seven months only amounts to the grand total of about thirty fish of about six pounds each. Whereas, last year, the total numbered five hundred of about six pounds each—one hundred fish per man last year, while this year we have the splendid total of six fish per man. Your board must understand very well by this time that there must be something wrong somewhere. If your board do not look into this important matter at once the salmon industry will become a complete ruin on the River Shannon. Perhaps your board wants the fishing industry to be added to that long list of industries ruined by mismanagement by having men placed at the head of affairs lacking the average ability God gave to mankind (laughter). The Athlone fishermen also wrote calling attention to the great decrease in the salmon fishing for the past two yeard. In fact it does not pay to take out a 23 net licence, and if the board did not make some change the salmoniwill be as Your board must understand very well by this onknown in that part of the river as sturgeon. For instance the net fishermen only gottins year, between them 16 spring fish, while other years they get ten times that quantity.

Mr Mackay, with reference to the complaints of the fishermen as to the decrease in salmon fishing, observed that it was a bad business, for the fishermen, no matter what it may be for the board, It was their business to do all they board, It was their business to do all t possibly could to remedy that state of things. Mr Vausittart said what effected them m

Mr Mackay attributed a good deal of this result to the fact there were no bailiffs to mind the small rivers.

The Chairman—I think it would be well to postpone the consideration of these communications until the date for the appointment of bailiffs, when the complaints contained in them could be dealt with. Evidently they consider that sumcient protection is not |given.

Mr Russell said this result might be accounted for ton great extent by the fact that the laws relating to the weekly close time were more more strictly entorced.

The Chairman said he had made it his business to pay particular attention to this subject, and the decrease had been exceptional with regard to the produce of salmon in this country. The quantity had fallen to an extent unparalleled, and though, as Mr Mackay had said it had not fallen off so much as Scotland, the decrease was extra-
