HAD an exciting few minutes telephone conversation with Buttevant band-leader Michael O'Callaghan before he left Shannon Airport on Wednesday week. Michael told me that his show-band will be guests of honour at a dinner in Toronto on St. Patrick's Day and that this will be followed by a television show in the afternoon and a gala ball that night. This looks like being one of the most ambitious tours ever by an Irish Showband. All Last week-end they played a week-end stint in the Jaeger House Ballroom in New York, followed by three days in the sun in Miami, three dates in Chicago and appearances in Toronto and Montreal. Their travelling will be by jet, as the promoter feels that air travel is the only solution to frayed nerves and consequent poor performance. May I wish the best of good luck to my friend Michael and his boys on this very ambitious and well-deserved tour.
