

● SIXTY seven pence for a glass of Seven Up. Now what do you think of that?

Neither is my claim by way of second hand information. That's what I paid folks last week for a glass of the fizzy stuff in a local hotel.

What's more, I felt short-changed. The half pint glass I was handed over the counter was about three quarters of the measure intended.

I always thought being a pioneer had its advantages.

Maybe it has, but the very sight of a customer wearing a pin must have hoteliers rubbing their hands in delight.

Without pulling any punches, I think it is outrageous to charge 67p for a soft drink—indeed, it is enough to drive a person to the hard stuff.

Imagine treating four children to a round in any of our hotels. At £3 a time you would be into a tenner before they would have settled in.

When I think of 67p, I automatically equate it with 13/6 in old currency. If anybody had told me twenty years ago that a bottle of Seven Up, or any other soft drink for that matter, would soar to above 10/- in the late 1980's I would ● STILL on the subject of alcohol, I was amused by an item on page one of our city edition announcing that Ballynanty Rovers Soccer Club, whose premises were damaged by fire after a break-in, were to have a pub and house-to-house collection.

I can only assume that the search for funds was to cushion the hardship brought about by the fire.

To the best of my knowledge, Ballynanty have a thriving bar on the premises. Whether it closed as a result of fire damage I do not know, but I do question their wisdom in prompted to do the same thing.

● I THINK it is about time that the Garda authorities issued guidelines to motorists on how to use roundabouts.

As one who daily uses a couple of the city's modern-day highways, I must confess that I have had quite a few scares, not due to any negligence on my part.

Motorists, particularly those from the county, have not been educated into using the system, and are often very confused when confronted by a kind of risks.

TUESDAY BLUE ON TV

Tuesday Blue: Mick Ryan, Dave Keary, Ralph Lindheim and Ray Fean. Missing from photograph is Tom Jones.

Fans of the Limerick rock band, Tuesday Blue, will be delighted to hear that the band have been invited by R.T.E. Radio 2 to represent Ireland and the Dave Fanning Rock Show at the European Broadcasting Union Rock Festival, which will be held in Liverpool from Monday, September 29, until Saturday, October 4.

Ten European countries will be taking part in the Festival, which will be seen live throughout Europe. "This is a big break for the group. The potential estimated listenership of the festival is 250 million people", said manager of Tuesday Blue, Mr. Hayman Harris.

R.T.E. will on Tuesday night, September 30, transmit live from Liverpool, Tuesday Blue's performance.

And prior to their departure to Liverpool the group will give two late night concerts here in Limerick—on Thursday, September 18, and Thursday, September 25, at the Savoy.
