Nash returns for White House show

LIMERICK singer Fergal Nash is the special guest artist at this Thursday's Acoustic Club at the White House Bar.

The Kilcornan man, who released debut album Take It Over in 2013, cut his teeth in the White House at the legendary Three Songs show and says he is delighted to return to the pub this Thursday.

Nash says he will be previewing songs from his forthcoming second album at the acoustic gig, which is open to all to attend - it's a free show - and to perform at.

Artists are encouraged to contact Dominic at limerick-writerscentre@gmail.com to book a spot or turn up on the night to perform. The gig kicks off at 9pm sharp.

Shardborne look forward to debut album launch gig

LIMERICK band Shardborne release their debut album this Friday, with a gig in Dolan's Warehouse to follow on Saturday night.

The four piece instrumental progressive metal band release Living Bridges on local label Out On A Limb on July 10.

The debut long player for the band is a follow up to the well received 2011 EP Aeonian Sequence, and the product of more than two years work for Shardborne, who went out of their way to make it a record to be proud of.

And what a record - bone shuddering in places, but bursting with melody and the soaring guitar lines of twin brothers Eoin and Ciaran Culhane - filling in for of vocals - together with the driving

Little Green Cars return for city show

TICKETS have gone on sale for a show with top Irish band Little Green Cars in September.

The five piece, who hail from Dublin, play a show in Dolan's Warehouse on Saturday, September 19.

Little Green Cars, who released one of the albums of 2013 in Absolute Zero, memorably played a superb gig that year for Seoda Shows in Bourke's Bar, unfortunately now closed.

Tickets for the Dolan's show are on sale from the venue's website priced at €16.

Also on sale now are tickets for the Seoda Shows presented gig with American musician Ben Miller on Wednesday, July 29.
