Compiled by ETIENNE RYNNE

Dr. MacLysaght has long been a prolific writer in a great many fields, and the list of his published works presented here includes not only his more serious scholarly publications but also his novels and poetry. While every effort has been made to make the list as complete as possible, including consultation with the author himself, it does not pretend to be so. Very few of the many articles and notes published by him in Irish newspapers have been listed, even though many of them were of a scholarly nature and include such as “Do theip oráinn sa deireadh” in An Pobal (Samhain 1972) in which he outlined the attempt made during the early decades of the present century to create a nua-Ghaeltacht in East Clare. Indeed, also omitted are all the book reviews in learned journals, and also editorials and other articles which he wrote in the all-Gaelic monthly An Sguad between October 1922 and May 1924, not to mention those articles published therein under the pseudonym “An Chó Mhall” or the initials “C.M.”. Furthermore, as Dr. MacLysaght is still active and writing, this list cannot hope to include articles and books which he has at present in preparation.
