Appendix

Almost as an afterthought, but not quite, it was realised that this is a suitable occasion to reprint the index for the two earlier runs of journals published by the Limerick Field Club (1897-1908) and the North Munster Archaeological Society (1909-1919). This index, published by the Thomond Archaeological Society in 1958 was prepared by its long-time member Dermot Foley some twenty years previously when he was County Librarian for Clare. A small but most useful publication, it is now virtually impossible to obtain, even in the best second-hand bookshops, and it is therefore reprinted without alteration, including original pagination, as an Appendix.

INDEX TO JOURNAL

DERMOT FOLEY, F.I.A.I., CITY LIBRARIAN, CORK.
INTRODUCTION

The pedigree of the North Munster Archaeological Society (N.M.A.S.) begins with the foundation of the Limerick Naturalists' Field Club in 1892, but it was not until 1897 that a journal was published. By that time, field work had spread to photography and archaeology, and in the same year the name Limerick Field Club (L.F.C.) was adopted as the more appropriate title. That was again changed in 1909, to the North Munster Archaeological Society, a name which remained until the end in 1919.

From 1897 to 1919 a journal was published, usually four times a year but, towards the end of the period, less frequently (none appeared in 1917). It may therefore be as well to enumerate the series, and to show how the volumes and parts have been treated in the Index references. There were seven volumes in all, the first three with the L.F.C. title, the last four under the N.M.A.S. title.

It will be seen that all seven volumes are regarded in the Index as volumes One to Seven of the N.M.A.S. Journal, and that there is no reference either to the L.F.C. as a title, nor to the published volume numbers of the N.M.A.S.

This arrangement was adopted to avoid the cost and inconvenience of adding "L.F.C." or "N.M.A.S." as a prefix to references. Again, the various pagination of Volume One required that all its parts be specified in the references. With Volume Three, it was found that only part Ten needed specific reference, for it alone had a separate paging which, in effect, was corrected by the resumption of the through paging for the remaining parts.

The Index was compiled as far back as 1938, when I was County Librarian for Clare, and an active member of the Society, and was undertaken at the suggestion of Mr. J. N. A. Wallace. I felt then that it would have been wiser to postpone it until I had learnt more about the territory's history and remains, and so, for example, avoid committing errors of name and location which I fear experienced members of the Society may all too easily detect now. But Mr. Wallace was not of that opinion, and indeed he was always available to correct my most serious mistakes. In any case, none of us at that time could foresee that arguments on the correctness of cromlech or cromleac or doimn, or on Westropp's phonetic rendering of a name in Irish, would have to be laid aside until the newer remains of a second world war were excavated. And now that the work of 1938 is to be printed, it is no longer possible to resume the arguments with members who could resolve them, for I am no longer in the Kingdom of Thomond, and dare not disagree with anyone.

It was never our intention to produce a word index. What was aimed at was one which would reveal information easily to our members; and so, cross-references were almost entirely avoided, and names of any person or thing did not gain admittance to the Index when the name, but nothing about it, was mentioned in the text.

It only remains for me to acknowledge, which I do very gladly, my indebtedness to Mr. Wallace for the help he gave me twenty years ago. He read the manuscript then, and while it would be wrong to imply that he corrected it—for that would amount to throwing on him the responsibility, which is mine alone, for any errors the Index contains—it is certainly true that he made many valuable suggestions, all of which I adopted. And since all the final preparations for printing had to be arranged by correspondence, it is proper of me to say that I owe much to Miss Mary Duane, the Society's joint Honorary Secretary; to Mr. Stanush Stewart, Honorary Treasurer; and to Dr. D. F. Gleeson, D.J., for relieving me of many difficulties.
