with the Britpop band - who split in 2010 - released his second solo record, the excellent Matador, earlier this year and is embarking on his second round of touring this month, with just a handful of dates in these parts, in Dolan's Warehouse, in Belfast and in support to Paoli Nutini in Marlay Park in July. Coombes, who was relaxed and promised to play some "gems" at the Limerick show.

A charismatic former frontman of the group whose debut I Should Coco was Parlophone's fastest selling debut since The Beatles' Please Please Me, Coombes has plenty to say, both in person and on record, and this is an unmissable gig.

Gareth 'Gaz' Coombes comes to Limerick for a show in Dolan's this Friday (doors 7.30pm, tickets €22). The former Supergrass frontman - they split in 2010 citing 'musical differences' - has released his second album, the excellent Matador, subject to plenty of critical acclaim. # Randolf & the Crokers get ready to release new EP

UP and coming Limerick band Randolf & the Crokers launch their new EP with a gig this Friday.

The six piece group release four track debut EP Conversation Amongst the Ruins this Friday, and play Upstairs in Dolan's, followed by dates in Kenny's Lahinch, the Greyhound in Kilkee, plus Dublin and Galway.

The EP confirms the band's undoubted talent, which was exhibited on lead single Hangin' - boasting a great country/folk vibe - honed through regular gigging since forming in 2011.

The EP marks Randolf & the Crokers' first physical recording - mastered in Limerick by Richard Dowling - and blends blues and country in-
