

Computer helps track down gang

A DUBLIN gang is believed to have carried out a series of robberies in Co Limerick over the last fortnight, getting away with thousands of pounds worth of jewellery and cash from homes in Rathkeale, Bruff, Croom, Doon and Newport.

Using the Pulse computer system to link the robberies through different garda divisions, investigators now believe they know the members of the gang from the Tallaght area. They have targeted mainly vacant houses in the county as well as Cork and Tipperary, and other areas on their way back to Dublin.
