We know from previous U21 titles that nothing can be taken for granted. But we have renewed hope again that the Liam MacCarthy cup will be ours again before too long.

Artist impression of St Saviour's Dominican Church before it was built

Slain bishop to be honoured with chapel

From the Limerick Chronicle: Tuesday, July 28, 1981

LIMERICK martyr, Bishop Terence Albert O'Brien, who died at the hands of Ireton's soldiers in 1651, will be remembered in the new side chapel at present under construction at St. Saviour's Dominican Church, Limerick.

A model of the church, incorporating the new Terence Albert O'Brien

Memorial Chapel, made by Newenham, Mulligan and Associates, Henry Street, is now on display in the church.

Parish priest

The Parish Priest and Prior of St. Saviour's, Fr. K. O'Dwyer, told the Chronicle that the changing pattern of Sunday Mass attendance had led to the need for extra accommodation at later Masses.

The new side chapel will hold up to 300 people, and will include a "crying chapel" for parents and very young children.

Invalids and wheelchair users will also be facilitated with a special ramp for their convenience.

Commenting on the appropriateness of the name of the new chapel, Fr. O'Dwyer said that Terence Albert O'Brien had also been a prior of St. Saviour's and the cause of his beatification is now being followed up in Rome.

The model on display also shows a model of a well-known neighbouring piece of architecture, Tait's Clock.

Before the clock

"But we were here before the clock," said Fr. O'Dwyer proudly. "The foundation stone of this church was laid on March 27, 1815."

Incidentally, the Dominicans celebrated the seven hundredth anniversary of their coming to Limerick in 1977.
