Road to "Poul Gorm" wanted

BORD FAILTE is to be asked by the Clare County Council for a special grant to make a road leading to what members of the Council describe as "the best fishing spot on the Irish Western coast."

Mr. Gerald Griffin told the Council that the spot was near Killard, Doonbeg, and was known as "Poul Gorm." It had always been well-known for fishing but since sea-angling gained popularity tourists flocked there. This year it was nothing to find forty to fifty people fishing shoulder to shoulder there and at times there were representatives from five or six countries present. It was also a very popular bathing spot. Access to "Poul Gorm" was through private property and while the owner, Mr. Martin Haugh, was most co-operative his land was being torn up and he would be forced to close it off if something was not done.

The County Engineer's report on the matter stated that it would cost £2,830 to make the road.

After a number of Councillors had spoken on the attractions of "Poul Gorm" for anglers and its popularity with tourists the Council agreed to seek a grant from Bord Failte.

Clare will remember

The 50th Anniversary of the 1916 Rebellion is to be suitably celebrated in Clare. This was decided at a meeting of the Clare County Council, at which Mr. Sean O'Connor proposed that the Council direct any proposed celebrations next year and that a special committee be appointed to decide on the best manner in which to commemorate the historic event. He added that the Old I.R.A. should be strongly represented on the special committee.

Mr. T. F. Smythe seconded, and the County Manager, Mr. T. J. Boland, said that a member of the Council's clerical staff would be placed at the disposal of the committee.

A FILM WITH A DIFFERENCE FOR LIMERICK FAMILY

"IT is a peculiar, but very thrilling feeling to watch your own brother on the screen and see his name up in lights," said Noel Harris, brother of film star, Richard Harris, to-day. He was commenting on the film, "Major Dundee," which is currently running at the Savoy Cinema, Limerick, starring Richard Harris and Charlton Heston.

Noel said he liked the film, but did not think it was the best his brother had made. "However, it had good acting, wonderful scenery and camera work and provides a very good night's entertainment," he added.

Limerick born Dickie Harris made five films last year. "Red Devils," "Three Faces of a Woman," with Soraya; "The Bible," directed by John Huston; "Major Dundee" and "The Heroes of Telemark," which has just finished its London run and will be seen in Dublin shortly.

DEDICATED

While Noel Harris thought Dickie's best role was in "This Sporting Life," he was very impressed with his character portrayal of the rebel in Major Dundee.

"Dickie is one of the most sincere men I have ever met," said Noel. "I would like to scotch the image of him as a hard-drinking, difficult type of person. This is an image which has grown up abroad recently, but he is just dedicated to his profession."

Harris is making a film called "Hawaii" in Hawaii at present. He hopes to come home at Christmas, then he is off to Australia to star in another picture. The Limerick boy has gone a long way.
