HOSPITAL CO. LIMERICK

Post town and parish. Population of parish 1,438; of town 657. It derives its name from an hospital for knights templars founded here in 1226 by Geoffrey de Marisco, then lord justice of Ireland. The site, with its possessions, was granted by Elizabeth to Sir Valentine Browne, who erected a castle near it, which was subsequently called Kenmare castle, his descendants having been created earls of Kenmare. Part of the ancient church remains, and there is a rude figure of a knight in a niche in the chancel. Land in general remarkably good, and chiefly under grass, resting on a substratum of limestone through which appears some small rocks of basalt. The parishes of Ballinlough (pop 450) and Ballynamona (pop 306) served from this post office. There are two eminences in the parish of Ballinlough, one called Cromwell's hill, and the other Cromwell's moat; both have traces of works on them, but apparently of much greater antiquity than the time of Cromwell.
