THE GLENTWORTH HOTEL

YET ANOTHER successful year's trading for Limerick's Glentworth Hotel — and this week came a big 'thank you' from general manager Michael Fagan, his management team and staff to their patrons.

"We have had a very busy twelve months and in addition to retaining the custom of all our old friends, we made many new ones as well", he said.

In keeping with tradition the Glentworth have come up with a very special Christmas programme of entertainment.
Last year they decided to try to re-establish ballroom dancing in Limerick.

It proved an instant success.
Held every Sunday and Wednesday, the Ballroom of Romance has built up a regular following.

Maura O'Connell, who has responsibility for this project, has persuaded some of Ireland's leading bands to participate in their Christmas festivities.

This Sunday, for example, the very popular Tony Egan will be on stage. On December 28 it will be the turn of Pat McNamara, and the New Year party, on January 2nd, will have The Moonshiners as the main attraction.

Said Maura: "We attract a middle of the road audience with a good mix of couples and singles. We are one of the few promoting ballroom dancing and there is obviously a need if one is to judge by our numbers".

The Glen Ballroom of Romance has a very loyal following from Counties Limerick, Clare, Tipperary and Kerry —
"but we also get a good sprinkling of city folk".

A great night out can be had at the Glen.

Admission is a modest £3, with supper for an additional one pound.

A number of special discos are lined up for the holiday period, starting this weekend. Gala nights are planned in the ballroom on Friday and Saturday, and Santa Claus and reindeers will be in attendance on Monday for what should be a truly memorable occasion.
The Disco resumes on St.
Stephen's Night, with another on Saturday 27th, the latter promising to be something above the ordinary.

All the discos will be held in the ballroom, offering maximum comfort. Disc jockey is John Moloney.

Keep a date with the Glentworth for their New Year's Eve disco, with an admission charge of £6.50, including food and champagne.

The car park on the old Lyric site has helped to win over many new customers for the Glentworth Hotel. The hotel has also undergone many changes and is acknowledged as being one of the most comfortable in the region.

Those thinking of getting engaged over the Christmas period are invited to avail of a very special offer at the Glentworth where it will be arranged for them to have a portrait taken in conjunction with Billy Miller, photographer, free of charge. Just call to the desk at the hotel and ask for details. This offer ends on January 31st.
