

quirements.
 Maureen Toal as "Mamie Flanagan" played her part too simplistically.

For a record of virtues, there were two fine portraits from Robert Carlisle and May Cluskey, as "Dandy McCabe" and his wife.

Barry Cassin, in "The Bishop" role, missed (this time) the modulation and conscience twinges the sermon should give.

The settings were perfect — and, the lighting in the April night murder scene, caught all the cold of the moonlight.

Despite the enthusiastic applause following the final curtain on "The Field," last night, there was feeling that the production and all the acting didn't quite bridge the credibility gap between players and audience—the real yardstick of the theatre.

Was it the discomfiture of actors trying to adjust themselves after long stints on T.V. serials to the live theatre?

The success and audience appeal of the ten-weeks festival will depend on the immediate realisation of this adjustment.

This being agreed, I relay the appeal made by the Mayor—go, see and support.

Hotel is opened

THE MINISTER for Justice, Mr. Desmond O'Malley, yesterday officially opened the Hotel Green Hills, Ennis Road, Limerick. He said that he hoped the events which may have affected the growth in the Irish tourist industry this year would quickly change.

Mr. O'Malley added that he was not referring specifically to the Northern troubles. He said they had been unable to maintain this year the fairly dramatic increase in tourism that they had come to expect.

He said it was a good thing to see hotels like the Hotel Green Hills opening and to see Limerickmen invest their money in their own town.

The proprietor of the new hotel, Mr. Bryan Greene, presided at the luncheon which followed the opening.

The Mayor of Limerick, Clr. J. P. Liddy, was present.

The hotel was blessed by Very Rev. John Browne, P.P., Caherdavin.

Very Reverend M. J. Talbot, Dean of Limerick, attended.

The music was supplied by Red Clancy.
