Secretary for Ireland, acknowledging a letter from Mr John Mains, M.P., requesting him to receive a subject of providing railways to obviate distress in Donegal, there would be no prospect of Parliament a vote for the purchase shown that the distress was spread that the poor law was not it. He is glad to say that inquiries show that, so far, to anticipate such a con-

OVER A GRAVE.

Friday.—An unusual scene occurred at the Roman Catholic cemetery being dug for the body of a woman by her brother. Objecting members of the family as to burying her remains in that parish family was split up into two factions, and these two factions were determined to settle the matter by force. A pitched battle the gravedigger rushed off to the cemetery. After considerable difficulty succeeded in separating the two parties and taking them back to the grave to be dug on the ground determined on; but the disunited party who had accepted his decision fighting may be expected at the
