

the great measure of a Legislature Union between this kingdom and Great Britain.

"The proofs you have given on this occasion of your uniform attachment to the real welfare of your country, inseparably connected with the security and prosperity of the Empire at large, not only entitle you to the full approbation of your Sovereign, and to the applause of your fellow-subjects, but must afford you the surest claim to the gratitude of posterity.

"You will regret with his Majesty the reverse which his Majesty's Allies have experienced on the Continent—but his Majesty is persuaded that the firmness and public spirit of his subjects will enable him to persevere in that line of conduct which will best provide for the honour and the essential interests of his dominions, whose means and resources have now, by your wisdom, been more closely and intimately combined.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I am to thank you, in his Majesty's name, for the liberal supplies which you have cheerfully granted for the various and important branches of the public service in the present year.

"His Majesty has also witnessed with pleasure that wise liberality which will enable him to make a just and equal retribution to those bodies and individuals, whose privileges and interests are affected by the Union, and he has also seen with satisfaction that attention to the internal prosperity of this country, which has been so conspicuously testified by the encouragement you have given to the improvement and extension of its inland navigation.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have the happiness to acquaint you that the country in general has in a great measure returned to its former state of tranquillity. If in some districts a spirit of plunder and disaffection still exists, those disorders, I believe, will prove to be merely local, and will, I doubt not, be soon effectually terminated.

"The pressure of scarcity on the poorer classes, though much relieved by private generosity, and by the salutary provisions of the Legislature, has been long and unusually severe; but, I trust, that under the favour of Providence we may draw a pleasing prospect of future plenty from the present appearance of the harvest.

"I am persuaded that the great measure which is now accomplished could never have been effected but by a decided conviction on your part that it would tend to restore and to preserve the tranquillity of this country, to increase its commerce and manufactures, to perpetuate its connexion with Great Britain, and augment the resources of the Empire. You will not fail to imprint the sentiments on the minds of your fellow-subjects—you will encourage and improve that just confidence which they have manifested in the result of your deliberations on this arduous question. Above all, you will be studious to inculcate the full conviction, that, united with the people of Great Britain into one kingdom, governed by the same Sovereign, protected by the same laws, and represented in the same Legislature, nothing will be wanting on their part but a spirit of industry and order, to insure to them the spirit of industry and order, to insure to them the full advantages under which the people of Great Britain have enjoyed a greater degree of prosperity, security, and freedom, than has ever yet been experienced by any other nation.

"I cannot conclude without offering to you, and to the people at large, my personal congratulations on the accomplishment of this great work, which has received the sanction and concurrence of the Sovereign on the anniversary of that auspicious day which placed his illustrious Family on the throne of these Realms. The Empire is now, through your exertions, so completely united, and so firmly strengthened, that it can bear the weight of all the efforts its enemies can make to weaken it by division, or to overturn its foundations. Under the protection

With sincere concern we have to announce, that for the last six nights past, several parts of this County, and even approaching to the Liberties of this City, the same wanton and barbarous atrocities which have brought to many unfortunate wretches to the Gallows, have been committed with impunity!—Whipping inoffensive Dairy-Men,—burning and otherwise destroying their property, for not disposing of their Masters' Milk and Butter at the regulated prices fixed on by the Leaders of those Rebels, is now carried on with redoubled malignity!—If some speedy and effectual measure is not found to prevent these horrid excesses, we are convinced, the luxuriant County of Limerick will be depopulated, at least by the unprotected loyal and peaceable Gentry and Farmers.

About the hour of three, this morning, an alarming fire broke out in the Corn Stores of Messrs. Wilson, in Denmark-street, occasioned, as it is supposed, by the fire in the adjoining kiln—happily it was got under with the loss of a few barrels of oats, and part of the roof being destroyed.
