Under the heading "Krischen of Note," the following interesting article on James Clarence Mangan appears in "The Southern Cross," published in Buenos Aires, South America...

Who has not heard that beautiful impassioned song "Dark Rosaleen," the original Irish version of which was composed during the reign of Queen Elizabeth by the Bard of Red Hugh O'Donnell?

Looking over the pages of his life, one wonders at the beauty and delicacy of the thought's bloomed in a mind which could not have become embittered by his circumstances...

Finally, a further word of explanation of the meaning of a "Privileged Mass" may be welcomed. A privileged Mass is one in which the priest is not the ordinary minister of the Holy Sacrifice...

It need hardly be explained that a plenary indulgence, even if gained in full, does not necessarily, when applied to the dead, release a soul from purgatory...

Another point worth remembering is this—Probably the majority of priests are laymen, because they have not the facilities of an altar and because they are not themselves privileged...

Deep regret is felt in Tipperary at the death of Mr. Michael O'Shea. He came home from England in 1938 to take part in the G.P.D. rising...
