JIMERICK LEADER SPECIAL.

(By Tom Talty)

of the past most people carry in their minds the image of a library as an old building filled with dusty and the curved spines of withering men's books. But the truth is far removed from such a picture as we visit the County Library in Limerick, where近百日, 1月 01, Mr. Dan Doyle, who took me through the main features of the collection, said:

"There are over 100,000 books in the collection, and we have a range of subjects from art to science. Our library also houses a large collection of audio and visual materials, including films, music, and art objects."

The library is a model of efficiency, with a large number of books catalogued and available for borrowing. The staff is trained in library science and is on hand to assist patrons with any queries they may have.
