The Case For Local Patriotic Limerick

The late Mr. O'Mara, was married to a Limerick lady, a daughter of the late James J. O'Dwyer, merchant tailor. He is survived by his widow and two sons—Stephen and James, who control and direct the big business of O'Mara Ltd., and Bacon Shops Ltd., respectively.

The news of Mr. O'Mara's death will be keenly felt in Limerick, not only by the business community, but also by the public who knew him. His personality was such that he was loved by all who knew him. During his mayoralty, he was outspoken in his support of the League of Nations and in his condemnation of British mistreatments.

Following the signing of the Treaty of 1921, he supported the cause of Irish independence and was active in the anti-Treaty struggle. From his brother, Stephen, who was a member of the anti-Treaty party, he received a great deal of help and support.

Mr. O'Mara was a man of many parts. He was a merchant, a politician, and a friend to all. He will be greatly missed by his family and friends.

J. P. McNamee, a former mayor of Limerick, paid tribute to Mr. O'Mara, saying that he was a man of great integrity and a true friend of the city.

Mr. O'Mara was a man of great vision and a leader of the people. He was a man who knew what was right and was not afraid to speak out for it. He will be remembered as a man of courage and integrity.
