THEATRE ROYAL.

"Hamlet."

Under Marsh and his talented company a cordial reception at the Theatre Royal when they opened a three weeks engagement was a large audience present to see the opening performance, Shakespeare's tragedy "Hamlet"—the play which has set in striking reflections of human life. It is a glowing tribute to Denmark to be that the lightest drama has not been lost in the affections of our people. Last performance was a convincing proof of the art of Denmark to the pure drama and its art to elevate and refine. Let us bring Mr Marsh's visit the same spirit and magnanimity as that shown by audience towards "Hamlet" will be undertaken while his return amongst a score of influences to his. It will be an extensive influence on his supported by a strong and cultured reading of the same part was anticipated, grave and acute. There did exuberance of enthusiasm as a desire to infuse in us to happily doing with a subsidiary grace. The role portrayed of "Ophelia" was being her love, her madness and presented with the true tenderness and pathos, and evoked the very sympathy. Miss May Gresham played the part of the "Queen" while Mr Stanley Vane's interpretation of "Claudius" was as noble perfection as any of the other parts there for full-length; on the contrary, it was in every way quite consistent and fascinating. The "Fencing of the Shrew" will be...

IRISH VOLUNTEERS.

Commandant-in-Chief.

We have received the following account of the above who was formally established for the city of Limerick as a large and enthusiastic meeting of women interested in the Volunteer movement, which was held at the Celtic League Rooms, Thomastown on Friday, 8th inst. A Provisional Committee was appointed to secure central offices, and arrange a plan of work in accordance with the scheme formulated by the central authority in Dublin. The Committee will meet during the week which a sub-committee will be appointed and enrollment cards issued to all these districts of joining the association. There is a hundred names have already been handed in. It is expected that the details will be completed, and the organization working on a monthly basis by the end of two months, when the Provisional Committee will cease to exist, and the elegance of officers, committee, etc. of a permanent nature will take place. For the present an announcement should be addressed to the Hon. Secretary, Commandant-in-Chief, 1 Macswiney street, Limerick.

LADY MARY CASSELL STEWART.

Representative of the Royal Stewards of Scotland.

Lady Cassell Stewart, wife representative of the Royal Stewards, being descended from Robert Stewart, third son of Robert II, King of Scotland, died at his residence, Stuart Hall, Stewartstown, Co. Tyrone, at the age of 77. He was a devoted member of the Church of Ireland. He had a church at the castle, where services were conducted by his brother-in-law. In politics the lady was a Conservative, but he took no practical part in present-day affairs. The lady was the wife of the fourth peer, whose bar succeeded in 1874. His mother, the Duchess of Devonshire, died eight years ago at the age of 96. Lord Cassell's noble ancestors held the Scottish baronies of Avicallis and Cullinstree, but they and their dignities fell to rest, and received an Irish peerage from James I by way of compensation. The Scotch barony contains a valuable collection of pictures. A first cousin is heir-præsumptive to the Earl of and other Irish titles, as Lord Cassell's wife has no sons. His two daughters are married to soldiers.

LIMERICK HEDDER BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

At the annual meeting of the above body held at the Synagogue Chamber on Sunday, 7th inst, the balance sheet, which was considered very satisfactory, was unanimously adopted. The following were elected officers for the present session:

The intention of the amending Bill is both to amend the present law, and to encourage the same in both places to put forward their schemes in the shape of amendments. Briefly, these may be summarized as follows:—
1. The unqualified exclusion of Protestant Ulster till she desires to come into the Home Rule system.
2. Exclusion for six years, and then a second plebiscite to be taken as an exclusion for a further term.
3. Exclusion pending the establishment of self-government all round.
Unless the Government deliberately draw the amending Bill to a career and restricted career will these points suggestions could be brought forward for discussion by means of the appropriate amendments. They would at least test the reality of the Government's protestation that they desire peace.

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.

London, Monday Night.

The House of Commons recessed to-morrow, but it is not likely that any very important business will be brought forward this week. Although the Home Rule Bill has gone from the House of Commons, the Irish question still dominates the situation. Doubtless further attempts will be made to induce Mr Asquith to discuss the terms of the Amending Bill, but it is not likely that these will succeed, says the Central News, if only for the reason that it would be contrary to precedents, when a Bill is introduced in the House of Lords, to forestall its introduction by an explanation of its provisions in the Lower House. The House of Lords cannot meet until next week, and before it proceeds to the Home Rule Bill it will first deal with the Welsh Church Bill. It is highly probable, therefore, that some time will elapse before any authoritative statement is made as to the object of the Amending Bill. During the week the further steps have been taken to bring about an agreed settlement of the Irish problem, but now that the political tides are likely to turn a renewed attempt will be made to arrive at a compromise.

MILITARY.

Annular the King and Queen at Olympia.

The visit of the King and Queen to the International Horse Show at Olympia yesterday afternoon was marked by a demonstration on the part of the audience. The great audience was at their highest pitch, and on seeing the strains of the National Anthem died away then a woman rushed in that part of the building immediately opposite the Royal box and down one of the gangways towards the arena, and attempted to scale the railings. She shouted—"Your Majesty why do you allow women to be admitted?" A policeman promptly seized her, and carried her quietly away to the accompaniment of surrounding cheers from the audience. Their Majesty, so far as could be observed, took no notice whatever of the interruption.

Later there was a further interruption by two other women, and as they were being removed one struggled violently. The great audience gave goose for the "antipretoria" and cheer for the soldier. The morning competition was then proceeded with, and when the Russian officers guarded there was another "antipretoria" incident, an exact repetition of those preceding in their countries—Belgium, France, Spain, and England—contested for the King Edward VII. Cup, which was won by Russia, and became their property. The trophy was presented by the King, amidst tremendous enthusiasm.
