LIMERICK, DECEMBER 30.

A horrid murder was lately committed at the our of Placentia, Newfoundland. A boy of name of Corcoran, belonging to the city of terford, having had an altercation with a man, m he irritated by imitating his method of ch, the man cut his head off with an axe.

*The death of the year is a striking emblem of our mortality, and impels us to the next of those few steps which lie between us and the grave.— Let us therefore make the best use we can of our time, and appropriate some portion of it to the sacred purposes of Charity. Let us, at this chilling season, in proportion to our several abilities, contribute to avert the piercing influences of Cold and Hunger from the defenceless head, and pour the balm of comfort into the wounds of sorrow.
Many are the unhappy objects that claim our attention, who are sinking beneath the pressure of famine and wretchedness, and steeped to the very lips in misery. And surely the reflection—that the Almighty Parent of all good will return to us an hundred and an hundred fold, the benefits we confer on our fellow-creatures, ought to quicken and expand the hand of Benevolence. We cannot make a more auspicious beginning than by decorating the youth of the year to this blessed work: we shall then acquire that happy temper of mind which will enable us to enjoy the gifts of Providence with a true relish; and each revolving day will add fresh flowers to the wreath of immortal roses, with which Virtue adorns the Angel form of Charity.*

* Mr. Duhigg's letter to the Peasants of his native County, (which we inserted in our last) shows the unvaried and unbiassed sense of a man devoted to Whiggism, but who justly conceives that a spirit of riot or disorder is equally hostile to established freedom, progressive national prosperity and it's noblest prop, a well-tempered and humane Peasantry. The scenery and effects of a Wexford rebellion, to which that gentleman's official situation exposed him, gives added weight to his reflections and irresistible strength to the advice.

It is impossible to dwell on the crimes or delusion which lately marked a certain district, without feeling that it's destructive spirit has been allayed by an union of legal talents, judicial integrity and constitutional exertions.—The Viceroy has thus upheld the lustre of his name by an happy mixture of justice tempered with humanity, and a zeal for order enforced by ancient and regular law—nor can Irishmen forget the enlightened native who presides in those councils—Lord Chancellor PONSONBY has united Irishmen of every class in an honest approbation of his manly councils through this entire business.— The official robe strengthens public freedom, and gives an happy presage worthy of perpetual imitation, that a correction of crimes can be effected without an adoption of evil precedents—whereby the seditious or ill-disposed will be deprived of any excuse for the continuance of public disorder, by an inability to affix a charge of despotism or cruelty on government in the mode of suppression.

A few days ago, a duel was fought near Tubber, on the confines of the counties of Clare and Galway, between Lieut. S—m, of the Royal Longford Militia, quartered in Ennis, and P.
O'K—y, Esq. of that town: The parties having discharged two pistols each, we are happy to state without any disagreeable consequences, severally retired.

men to so weak an advocate as myself, did I know that they will find a ready and warm cate in the breast of every man I have the ho-to address. The Thanks of Parliament werver better deserved, nor would they be any more highly prized; and I feel that the Me-is not more justly applied than it is happily t —for as the crisis is fast approaching when Country will expect every man should do his ty, what a noble incitement will it be for not barely, but enthusiastically to do their when their exertions are rewarded by the gtude of their country.—It is upholding and couraging that high sense of honour so con-cious in the fleets and armies of Great Brithat the Country will find its best security—it is because the measures of the Right Mover are built upon this foundation, that not only meet my approbation—but, as a Sol-demand my grateful acknowledgments.

little property unavailing, as the whole was sumed in a few minutes.

CHARITY SERMON.

On Sunday last, the Directors of St. Ma-Charity School were delighted to behold their low citizens of the first rank, pressing forto exercise the Divine Virtue of Charity, in your of near one hundred of our Orphans, were that day laid at the feet of public mercy The Preacher's appeal was energetic—it was isistible. He first convinced the mind, then gai-and won the heart. He proved to his hear-that their everlasting happiness depended on t Charity, feeding the hungry and thirsty, cloth-the naked, &c. &c. but much more by furning them with spiritual knowledge, feeding t immortal souls with the true bread of life, knowledge of God, and the divine truths of holy gospel. He also proved that our polit-salvation would, in a great measure depend c virtuous education of our poor.—In contras our situation with that of England, he shethat the great cause of all our miseries, was general neglect of giving good early impressiof industry and virtue, which can only be obted by a good education of the lower ranks—short, he clearly pointed out to all, how may literally "Lay up to themselves Treas-in Heaven."
