FESTIVAL

Other Voices will feature Limerick's whenyoung

whenyoung Niall Burns (guitar), Aoife Power (vocals/ bass), Andrew Flood (drums)

LIMERICK/ CLARE trio whenyoung are set to feature on 'Other Voices'. The London based indie band have bagged a much coveted slot at St James' Church in Dingle which will be filmed and broadcast by the seminal music TV show in early 2019 and streamed worldwide.

whenyoung played a terrific hometown show to a full house in Dolan's last week celebrating a busy 12 months that has seen their profile rise, with an EP released on Virgin EMI, a support tour with The Vaccines, loads of airplay for their single 'Given Up' and a fine cover of 'Dreams' by The Cranberries.

The band of Aoife Power (vocals/ bass), Niall Burns (guitar) and Andrew Flood (drums) is in the studio for the next few weeks recording a debut album which will feature some of the latest singles but will also delve into the broader wealth of new sounds that the band are working on right now.

Also confirmed to perform on 'Other Voices' are British R&B soul-singer and writer Mahalia, Arizona-born Americana performer Courtney Marie Andrews, singer songwriter David Keenan, and Super Furry frontman Gruff Rhys. The weekend of recordings will feature new UK artist Jade Bird, Sierra Leonean/ Irish rising soul star Loah and the South African singer and LGBTQ trailblazer Nakhane.

The music trail at 'Other Voices' always throws up some fine new talent and quality shows from the experienced artists. This year expect to stumble across Touts, JYellowL, r.kitt, Dowry, A. Smyth, Nialler9, Brand New Friend, Galants, Fears, Thumper, Girlfriend, the fizzing fuzz of Cork wunderkind Laurie Shaw & The Swamp People and the unorthodox pop of Derry's Strength N.I.A.

The IMRO Other Room this year welcomes Kitt Philippa, Columbia Mills, I Have A Tribe, Mango & Mathman and Kojaque.

'Other Voices' festival happens in Dingle from Friday November 30 to Sunday December 2.

COMEDY

Chris Kent's Lo

CORK comedian Chris Kent returns with his sixth solo show, traversing the country in early 2019. Chris has spent the past year balancing comedy with being a stay at home dad and "trying to grow a beard". Chris is known to all for appearances on the 'Craig Doyle Show' and playing Conor's Dad in the 'The Young Offenders'
