

on the way

+ all angles

from another angle is an exhibition of the work of past and present students, organised by a group of 4th year degree students at limerick school of art and design. the intention of the show is to exhibit a collection of artworks depicting ordinary life from an extra ordinary angle and the exhibition will show 28 pieces of original conceptual artworks.

among the exhibitors are aine flynn, jean o'dwyer, john caroll, sculptor edel gelston, painter maeve mulrennan, sibyl montague, diarmuid o'regan and edward kelly.

also exhibiting is curator, deirdre muldowney, who firmly believes that art is for everyone (and proves it by photographing dirty knickers) invoking touchingly, the mean secrets and small dreams that make us human.

as an exhibition, as a concept, life from another angle works. the non profit exhibition runs in the clare street campus of limerick school of art and design from may 15 to 30. for more details, contact flynnaine@eircom.com

+ quite frankly

following the success of performing the music of frank sinatra with the rat pack last march, stephen truffitt returns to uch on friday may 30 with his outstanding show "stephen truffitt celebrates sinatra".

for one evening, truffitt, with the nelson riddle orchestra, will pay homage to one of the finest musical collaborations that the 20th century has ever seen. truffitt is a big-band vocalist, and he has the most formidable credentials to prove it. He was cast as the lead role in "the main event", showing in atlantic city, playing ol' blue eyes himself and the show won him huge critical acclaim.

the seventeen musicians in the nelson riddle orchestra are of the highest calibre and they backed such great names as frank sinatra, barbara streisand and linda ronstadt. today, they continue that tradition by performing all the great sinatra/riddle musical arrangements in a style true to the original sinatra recordings.

+ nasty street

it's a busy few weeks for the streetlife crew with slam, the capoeira twins and justin robertson all appearing under their banner over the next few weeks. but it's no sleep till bedtime, as the crew have announced the return to limerick of billy nasty for a date on july 04.

billy nasty has been djing half his life, a career that has seen him spin for ten of those years at a professional level. travelling the world as one of the most in-demand dj's, he has performed at some of the biggest dance events and some of the most famous venues on the globe and consistently featured in the upper regions of dj magazine's annual top 100 world dj's. he has also enjoyed an extensive recording career, formed a techno label that's as respected as his djing and set up his own dj agency to expose nurtured talent to the rest of the world.

billy plays streetlife at the warehouse on friday, july 04. stay tuned to the next issue of LEG for more details.

+ sutras show

hot on the heels of woodstar as limerick's bright new hope are sutras who play the warehouse on friday may 23.

having just released their new single 'believe' on may 02 through world cup vinyl records, this should be their biggest home show to date. This radio only release, which was recorded in joe elliot's studio in dublin, is produced by pat o'donnell and ronan mchugh.

sutras arrived on the irish music scene in late '99. their debut gig in limerick attracted a large crowd and rave reviews from local press who said 'sutras are a class act, a powerhouse of talent and energy'. a few short months later, sutras won the heineken battle of the bands competition, which led to the band recording their first demo, and also to them playing a number of high profile gigs with well-known acts like the frames, the walls and mundy.
