Walter Mitty & The Realists

A refreshingly uncompromising and intensely captivating sound, delivered with uncontained semi-psychotic live energy, may be why Walter Mitty & The Realists have become one of the country's best known live acts. Or maybe it's just because they're good. Think choppy guitars, intricate bass lines, flurried drumming along with truly unique vocal styles...and you'd probably just get confused! An easier way to get a good idea of what this Limerick/Leitrim four-piece sound like would be to check out www.waltermittyandtherealists.com. They are currently recording their debut album (working title 'Green Light, GO!') with The Cranberries Fergal Lawler working the sound desk on engineering and co-production duties. Although they have yet to release anything, national broadcasters such as 2fm and TG4 have jumped on board their good ship, joining many others in inviting them in for live sessions. Word of the Mitty Boys has spread quickly since their incarnation in late 2006. Their constant gigging has seen them share stages with many indie-rocks luminaries, including the likes of U.K. giants Dirty Pretty Things and Iceland's favourite shoe-gazers, 'MuM'. This month will see them play Ireland's most prestigious showcase for new Irish talent, the Hard Working Class Heroes festival for the second year running. Other Limerick acts joining them this year are Supermodel Twins, Headgear, and Nick Carswell & The Elective Orchestra. If you don't fancy travelling, you can catch them in the Bell-table Theatre on Sept 4th, for a rare acoustic show. Or Sept 17th in Baker Place as part of the on-going ARTiculate sessions.
