

Entertainment

Watch and listen to music on the blog
www.musiclimerick.com

by Eric FitzGerald | eric@limerickpost.ie

Senakah launch 'Human Relations'

LIMERICK's Senakah (formerly Seneca*) recently completed the new album called 'Human Relations' which was recorded with Noel Hogan of the Cranberries on production duties. The album follows 2008's critically acclaimed debut 'Sweeter Than Bourbon'.

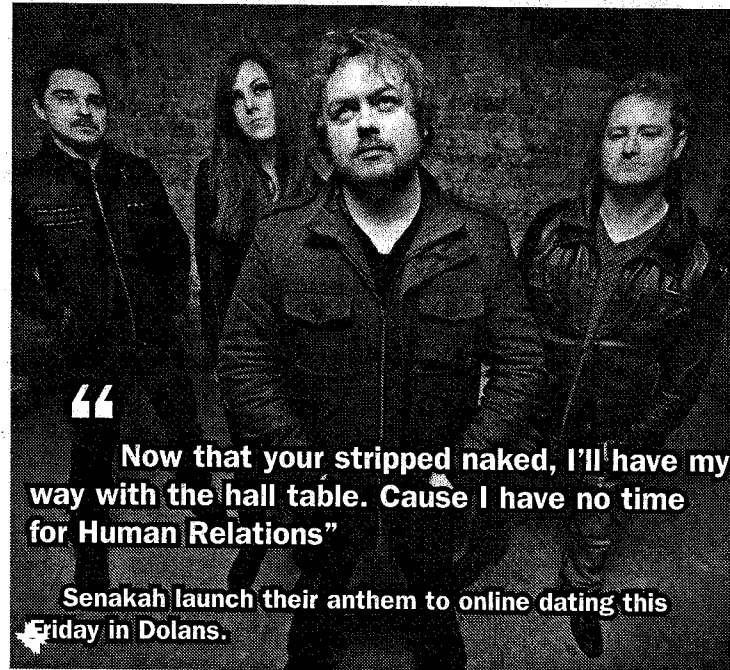

Senakah has produced a video for the first single to be lifted from the record which is the title track of the album and will be available on iTunes from this Friday. 'Human Relations' is a strong indie/pop single and has rightly received plenty of airplay and now the band is ready to go out on the road to kick off the campaign for the album and will play Dolan's Warehouse this Friday February 17. Senakah's guitarist Brendan O'Gorman told Limerick Post this week, "We are absolutely thrilled to bits! Radio support has been great with both local and national stations giving us regular airplay and we are very grateful for that. Today FM have been playing it daily and Rick O Shea of 2FM has just made it his 'Single of The Week'."

The video was written by, and stars, actor/comedian Ben Morrison and was filmed on location in Limerick in Dolans Warehouse and the boardroom and office scenes were filmed right here at Limerick Post.

Just how important is having a good video for a band's singles now that social media allows fans to re-post favourite videos. Brendan says, "A video certainly helps a lot, it gets people's attention and can help bring the song to a wider audience. From extensive touring over the past few years we've built up a large fan base both in the US and Ireland and some European countries. The social media aspect really helps to get your music straight to them and in turn allows them to share it with their own friends and though the hits for our video are not in the millions our YouTube stats show the video been viewed in 90 countries."

Senakah's new album will be released later this year, also called 'Human Relations'. The album was produced by Noel Hogan of The Cranberries. It was a mutually beneficial experience according to Brendan, "You have to be able to put your trust in a producer as you give them a lot of creative control over your music so working with Noel was fantastic. It's great to have someone with that much experience and ability. Noel also has great natural instinct

“
Now that your stripped naked, I'll have my way with the hall table. Cause I have no time for Human Relations”

Senakah launch their anthem to online dating this Friday in Dolans.

as a producer and really brought out the potential of the new songs."

Senakah will play London in March, followed by some European dates in April beginning in Switzerland. In the meantime Senakah play Dolan's Warehouse this Friday February 17.

"Going from Seneca to Senakah, (same pronunciation) the band changed the name slightly as it is copyrighted already in the US and are planning to tour there again in the future."

Watch and Listen to music at www.musiclimerick.com
Views from the Limerick Post music blog with Eric FitzGerald email your news / music links / video clips / press releases to: eric@musiclimerick.com

Milan Jay

Galway's Milan Jay could be one of the most eclectic bands in Ireland at the moment. They genre hop with ease from rock/indie to electro to rap on the band's three EPs released over the past 12 months. Milan Jay's music has been likened to 90s indie stalwarts the Beta Band and Super Furry Animals and has received positive attention from the likes of Steve Lamacq on BBC 6 Music and The Irish Times Jim Carroll. Originally a duo, John from Milan Jay told Limerick Post, "It's our first gig as a 3 piece, with the addition of a drummer, and our first gig in Limerick so really looking forward to this one." Milan Jay support Girl Band and Eleveltyfour in Bourke's this Thursday February 16. The series of high quality gigs on Thursdays continues into March with no less than two of 2012's Meteor Choice Music Prize nominees paying a visit. See Milan Jay on musiclimerick.com.

Siomha Brock

ENNIS singer Siomha Brock released my self titled debut EP late last year and will be touring it across Ireland this month including The Office Bar, Limerick on

Oscar Mulero for Macronite

Oscar Mulero One of Spain's premier techno DJs will play Macronite's first birthday, bash this Saturday February 18. From Madrid Oscar Mulero was

We Come in Pieces make 'A Night of the Living'

