Silver Jubilee Dinner of 1951 was a colourful and happy function

EARLY YEARS OF THE FIANNA FAIL PARTY IN LIMERICK

It is almost seventy years since the Fianna Fáil Party was founded and the earliest memories of its formation are those of Mr. de Valera, Mr. E. O'Malley, and the late Mr. G. O'Sullivan. Mr. de Valera was elected as the leader of the party in 1928 and Mr. E. O'Malley was elected as the second leader in 1932.

Mr. de Valera and Mr. O'Malley were both members of the Fianna Fáil Party from its inception. Mr. de Valera was elected as a member of the Dáil in 1928 and Mr. O'Malley was elected as a member of the Dáil in 1932.

In the early years of the party, the Fianna Fáil were involved in a number of political episodes. Mr. de Valera was involved in the 1932-33 crisis, while Mr. O'Malley was involved in the 1934-35 crisis.

Mr. de Valera was also involved in the 1937-39 crisis, while Mr. O'Malley was involved in the 1940-41 crisis.

In 1944, Mr. de Valera was elected as the leader of the party and Mr. O'Malley was elected as the second leader in 1945.

Mr. de Valera remained as the leader of the party until 1951, when he was succeeded by Mr. O'Malley.

Mr. O'Malley was succeeded as the leader of the party by Mr. L. Doherty in 1957.

The Fianna Fáil Party has been a dominant force in Irish politics for almost seventy years and has played a key role in shaping the political landscape of the country.

Mr. de Valera and Mr. O'Malley were both members of the Fianna Fáil Party from its inception. Mr. de Valera was elected as a member of the Dáil in 1928 and Mr. O'Malley was elected as a member of the Dáil in 1932.

In the early years of the party, the Fianna Fáil were involved in a number of political episodes. Mr. de Valera was involved in the 1932-33 crisis, while Mr. O'Malley was involved in the 1934-35 crisis.

Mr. de Valera was also involved in the 1937-39 crisis, while Mr. O'Malley was involved in the 1940-41 crisis.

In 1944, Mr. de Valera was elected as the leader of the party and Mr. O'Malley was elected as the second leader in 1945.

Mr. de Valera remained as the leader of the party until 1951, when he was succeeded by Mr. O'Malley.

Mr. O'Malley was succeeded as the leader of the party by Mr. L. Doherty in 1957.

The Fianna Fáil Party has been a dominant force in Irish politics for almost seventy years and has played a key role in shaping the political landscape of the country.

Mr. de Valera and Mr. O'Malley were both members of the Fianna Fáil Party from its inception. Mr. de Valera was elected as a member of the Dáil in 1928 and Mr. O'Malley was elected as a member of the Dáil in 1932.

In the early years of the party, the Fianna Fáil were involved in a number of political episodes. Mr. de Valera was involved in the 1932-33 crisis, while Mr. O'Malley was involved in the 1934-35 crisis.

Mr. de Valera was also involved in the 1937-39 crisis, while Mr. O'Malley was involved in the 1940-41 crisis.

In 1944, Mr. de Valera was elected as the leader of the party and Mr. O'Malley was elected as the second leader in 1945.

Mr. de Valera remained as the leader of the party until 1951, when he was succeeded by Mr. O'Malley.

Mr. O'Malley was succeeded as the leader of the party by Mr. L. Doherty in 1957.

The Fianna Fáil Party has been a dominant force in Irish politics for almost seventy years and has played a key role in shaping the political landscape of the country.