

following the fire at Todds in 1959, the entire site was demolished in 1960 to make way for the new, more modern building that stands today. It is interesting to note the entrance to William Street Garda Barracks through the arches of the burned out building.