Skelly also revealed a fuel tank to hold 2 million gallons is being constructed at the Soviet fuel farm. Apart from this, however, the capital programme gives little hope for employment in the area, and the possibility of an immediate start to the gas spur line to Limerick has been virtually ruled out. Limerick projects on which money will be spent this year include the completion and equipping of a new An CO training centre, the extension of the IIRS laboratory at Shannon, the completion of the extension of the jetty at Foynes. And although the allocation for sanitary schemes is also down, Limerick city west water scheme will be among the major projects to be financed. Work on the erection of transmission lines from Moneypoint will also go ahead this year, although the extra capacity is no longer needed, with a total of £167 million being spent on the project this year.

ANXIOUS WEEK FOR CITY

HIGH-RIDING Limerick City—they are still very much in the hunt for championship honours following their 2-0 win over Bohemians yesterday—are still uncertain about their future at the Markets Field and a clearer picture is likely to emerge this week.

Mr. John McNamara, the former chairman of Limerick United, has expressed annoyance at a statement issued by City Chairman, Mr. Pat Grace, at the week-end and denies that the problem between both clubs has been ironed out. Mr. McNamara issued the following statement before Sunday's game:

"Contrary to press reports and a statement by Mr. Pat Grace that the United/City problems have been sorted out we reluctantly state that the opposite is the case.

"Eight weeks of a breathing space between November 4 and January 2 have gone by without any effort on behalf of the Limerick City club to resolve the problem. A public invitation by United to Mr. Grace on Monday last has fallen again on deaf ears.

HELD
 "Due to the contempt that these people have held for our efforts we have no option but to insturct our solicitors to proceed against all concerned in the strongest possible manner, as and from Monday next. We consider the statement released by Mr. Grace most misleading and deceptive to the public. No more offers to settle will be made by, or accepted by, Limerick United Football Club."

Should Limerick United return to the courts, then City could find themselves locked out of the Markets Field for training from this week.

They are away to Waterford in a league fixture next Monday, but have a home tie the following week. They have also been drawn at home in the FAI Cup against Athlone Town.

"The whole affair is far from being settled," Mr. McNamara told the Leader.

City Chairman, Mr. Pat Grace, indicated in December that they were anxious to secure their own ground and hinted they had opened negotiations for the purchase of the Old Crescent ground in Rathbane. However, the deal has yet to be finalised and even if agreement was reached between both parties, it is most unlikely the ground would be available for use before Easter.

MOTORISTS MUST PAY 1p MORE AT PUMPS

MOTORISTS have to pay 1p more at the petrol pumps to-day, bringing the price at most outlets to just over 283p a gallon.

The increase was granted by the Government at the week-end, but a spokesman for a local station told the Leader price of a new car, the Irish motorist has reason to feel done by. Excise duty and VAT can claim over £2,000 on a car valued at £4,600.

The number of new cars registered in the Republic last year was just under 60,000—lower than the Northern Ireland total for the first time ever—and petrol sales were reported to be 12 per cent down on the previous year. The oil companies still argue that at least 8p extra per gallon was needed to compensate for the currency fluctuation and they have warned that unless a further increase is granted that job losses would follow.

There are a number of stations in the Limerick area selling at up to 12p less than the 283p being charged by the major oil companies.

Stole bottle of sherry

Eamon Fitzgerald, 45 years, no fixed abode, was fined £10 by Justice M. Reilly, at Limerick City Court on a charge of larceny of one bottle of sherry, valued £5.49p at Sarsfield Street, on December 29 last. The defendant pleaded guilty to the offence. Insp. Gerry Higgins told the court that the property was recovered.

Fined on drunk and disorderly charge

DARRAGH O'MALLEY, Garden Flat, St. Margaret's Mews, O'Callaghan Strand, was fined £2 by Justice M. Reilly, for being drunk and disorderly at O'Connell Street, on January 2, at Limerick City Court.

Garda Ben McNamara told the court that on the night in question the defendant came towards him when he was dealing with another situation.

"I heard my name being included in some bad language. I told him to go away but he still persisted," said witness.

"He called me a f... b... and Limerick's biggest b...," added witness.

"When I asked him his name, he said Darragh," said witness.

Witness said he requested the defendant to accompany him to the station, but he resisted.

"An unmarked patrol car then came on the scene and as the defendant was being pushed into the car he lifted his foot and struck me," witness told the court.

Witness said the defendant appeared to be very drunk.

Darragh O'Malley, who conducted his own defence, told the court that he was in Ted's on the night in question.

"I walked across the road to get a taxi in Cecil Street. I was close to the taxi when I saw the last witness administering a parking ticket on a car.

"It was my greeting, 'Hello, Ben,' that caused the upset," said witness.

Continuing, witness said the last witness grabbed him by the right arm in the middle of their conversation.

"My behaviour on the night did not warrant the last witness bringing his baton down on my right knee," witness told the court.

He said he was later told that he could drive home.

Call for tangible proposals for peace

"WHILE many pious wishes for peace and disarmament have been voiced by our politicians and the press, no tangible proposals have been made on behalf of Ireland at the United Nations," Nobel Peace Laureate Sean McBride stated this week.

He added in a letter to the politicians and press that the time has come when we should adopt more forthright attitudes and table our own or jointly with India and Sweden, concrete proposals for disarmament.

Mr. McBride stated that those in the International Peace Bureau had come to the conclusion that the nuclear powers do not have the political will to proceed to general and complete disarmament.

"We in Ireland, in common with other small nations should unhesitatingly rally to the United Nations and demand that the policies for general world disarmament adopted by the United Nations, are put into effect," he added.

Mr. McBride stated that we had a national and moral responsibility to do so not only Reduce substantially all military budgets and transfer the savings thus effected to use in health and development projects.

Request the Secretary-General to create a Register of all production, and transfer of arms as a first step leading to the prohibition of the manufacture of, and trade in, armament.
